J. M. WELDON. men in the days of brute barbarism are those that win the highest admiration among the high and gentle.

The Blair bill bobs up again with the catch penny idea of enlightening popular darkness at the expense of the government. Ignorance is one of those curses, like intemperonce, to be combated with vigor and persistence. But there is a right way to do both. The evils of intemperance are not to be suppressed by all the machinery of prohibition enactments; neither is ignorance to be dispelled by the government agency of distribution of public money among the people in the mode proposed by the advocates of the measure. Such fund so used is a corruption fund, looking more to the perpetuity of party ascendancy than the real good of those assumed to be aided. It is a fund, too, drawn through taxationalready overwhelming and burden- big stock of some, and drawn from a system of protection to special industries against which three-fourths of the people of the United States are now dress goods, notions, hats, boots, making their loud protests. If shoes, domestics, Tennessee wool, there were no oppressive tariff, no jeans, &c., will sell cheap and internal revenue, there would be good goods. I have a big lot of be no proposed Blair bill But St. Graham & Co. home made then the States could take care of their educational matters, of which a good man's stiff hat for $1.243; strous contributions of the national man's full stock boot $1.74%. treasury, could turn their money into their State vaults. therefor. But the loyalty of the North State to Northern monopolies now pro tected by the tariff is greatly cutraged by the proposition to cut down tariff duties on blankets, clothing, coal, salt and such things as actually are needed by the people for their sustenance and comfort. Blankets, for instance, are taxed one hundred per cent, we believe. and we learn that for the past fiscal year not a pair was imported, thus showing that the entire amount of the tax went to the manufacturers
