ZACHARY AND ZACHARY.

ASHEVILLE, N. C.

The Charlotte Chronicle says: An unknown negro man was killed by an Air Line freight train at Gastonia, last Friday night. He was stealing a ride, so it is believed, and fell between the cars. The wheels of one of the cars ran over his body and cut it entirely in two, the head and shoulders falling to one side of the track. The body was buried at Gastonia yesterday afternoon. The name of the unfortunate man is unknown.

The train that left Charlotte for Wilmington, on the Carolina Central road, last Friday night, was in charge of conductor Harry P. Johnson, and carried a large list of passengers. Among the list were two cow boys, the same two, by the way, who, a few evenings since, entered the Buford House dining room in their shirt sleeves, and they had neither tickets nor money. One was a Mexican and the other was a citizen of the great State of Texas. After the train started Mathews, the conductor demanded their tickets, whereupon they showed fight. The Mexican, a large and stoutly built fellow, struck at the conductor, and was surprised to find himself knocked down to the bulges, and dumped into the ditch near Indian Trail. The passengers sustained the conductor and were ready to assist him, but found it unnecessary. The "hoys" came back to Charlotte
