Visiting the Asheville Female College a few days ago we dropped into the room of the above named architect, and had an opportunity of seeing the drawings prepared by him for a Female College for the Methodist denomination to be erected in some town in Arkansas. The design is that adopted in the construction of the college building here with such changes and modifications as were suggested by experience, or difference in locality.

It is a matter of pride that the fine building here should have been after full comparison with other designs offered, adopted unanimously and enthusiastically as the model of an institution for similar purposes in a far distant State. In fact the Asheville Female College in architectural proportions and imposing effect, in convenience and harmony of internal arrangements; in admirable adaptation to its special uses, is the triumph of an architect skilled in his profession and combining into sound judgment all the elements of good taste.

The college stands an enduring monument of professional attainment, and its presence will always enure to the honor of Mr. Melton. We are not surprised at the recognition of his ability which now has flattering demand made upon it. The alterations in the interior of the Methodist church of Asheville, and his decorative designs have been adopted in the face of some sharp but creditable professional competitors. He has also in charge the construction of several fine private dwellings here, and also at Waynesville, among the former of which is the new home of Mr. M. E. Carter on French Broad Avenue, and that of Mr. Benjamin Atkins at the corner of Woodfin and Locust streets.

"Rip Van Winkle." The best performance yet given by the Meyer-Thorne company, was "Rip Van Winkle," at Opera Hall last night. Only an average audience was present, and the parts of "Rip" and "Greetchen" were exquisitely rendered. Mr. Thorne is simply immense in the leading character, and crowds Sefferson close for the laurel. This is no flattery but truth, pure and simple. Miss Meyer, as "Greetchen," made a grand hit. She is a clever little actress, and is a favorite with all who see her. The support was good indeed, and the entertainment was highly enjoyed. To-night Mr. D. E. N. Southworth's "Hidden Hand," will be presented, followed by the laughable, side-splitting farce "Josh Whitecomb." Let all turn out and give the Meyer-Thorne company a packed house. They deserve it.

Supreme Court. The News-Observer of the 18th contains the following of interest to this section. Court met yesterday morning at 11 o'clock. Twelfth district appeals were disposed of as follows:

Brown vs. Brown, from Jackson; argued by Jones and Stanford, R. D. Gilmer and T. F. Davidson for the plaintiff; no counsel contra.

Briggs vs. Jervis, dismissed for want of printed record. Carpenter vs. Terrell; argued by Norwood and Smathers, by brief, and R. D. Gilmer for plaintiff, and W. W. Jones for the defendant.

Wheeler vs. Heron; argued by Jones and Stanford for the plaintiff, and R. D. Gilmer for the defendant.

Weaver vs. Chunn; argued by Jones and Stanford for the plaintiff, and Charles A. Moore for the defendant.

CONGRESSIONAL. THE SENATE. WASHINGTON, D. C., April 18.—Mr. Brown, of Georgia, presented a large petition from citizens of his State protesting against legislation to suspend the rules as to executive sessions during the consideration of the fisheries treaty. The report was placed on the calendar and ordered printed.

Among the bills introduced and referred was one by Mr. Morrill authorizing the purchase of a site for a building for the supreme court of the United States.

Mr. Sherman discussed the bill for the admission of South Dakota. It had always struck him, he said, that opposition to Dakota as a State was totally unjustifiable and, lately, infectious—a much as to be subject to the severe criticism of everybody who liked to see fair play on the great questions affecting large masses of the people. Why, he asked, should Dakota be excluded as a state? He had listened to most of the debate and had not heard a single reason given for its exclusion. Never before had a territory applied for admission as a state with anything like such a population or such resources. Why should not South Dakota be admitted? In the name of heaven, why? Simply because the Democrats did not want the state admitted.

In the course of his speech Mr. Sherman showed by the vote in the Senate that the electoral commission bill was not a republican but a democratic measure. Twenty-six democrats had voted for it and only twenty-one republicans, while the votes against it were fourteen republicans (including himself) and one democrat (Mr. Eaton, of Connecticut). The democrats were, therefore, precluded from assailing the bill as a partisan measure. He declared his full conviction that Hayes had been fairly and legally elected, and that if by some honest means it had been ascertained that he would have been illegally elected, he would have been illegally elected. He explained the incompetency of Packard, not getting the governorship of Louisiana by showing that that was subject to local laws and decisions, and declared his conviction that Packard had been illegally deprived of his office.

In the further course of a long speech, in which Sherman incidentally touched upon current Louisiana politics, Sherman said that hereafter when any man asserted of President Hayes that he had been elected by fraud or wrong, or had not been duly elected, he should hold him in contempt as uttering that which was not true and which was decided by the very men who overthrew the local government in Louisiana in 1876.

Mr. Vest replied to Mr. Sherman and in the course of his remarks sent to the clerk's desk and had read extracts from a speech made on the Louisiana election of 1876 by Mr. Blaine, in which Mr. Blaine declared that the election of Mr. Hayes and of Mr. Packard, and asked who had the authority to make an arrangement by which Mr. Packard was not upheld? Mr. Vest sarcastically referred to the opposite sentiments of Mr. Sherman's speeches at Nashville, Tenn., and Springfield, Ill., and said that even at the risk of Mr. Sherman's threat of contempt he must hold to the opinion that Mr. Sherman's explanation of to-day was not satisfying to the people of this country.

THE HOUSE. The bill to establish a department of labor was passed.

The next bill called up was that to create boards of arbitration for the settlement of controversies and differences between interstate common carriers and their employes, and it was considered in committee of the whole, reported to the House, and passed.
