But a number of ermy officers, including members of the Court of Inquiry, suggest that the paymaster thus found at fault should be relieved from responsibility. This is much the fashion in these days. It is said that a safe should have been provided; that the paymester has a right to rely upon the fidelity and efficiency of the excert, and that the two men furnished him as an escert were unintelligent and negligent: that they should have been armed with guns instead of pistols, and that the instructions given to the escort by the paymaster were sufficient to acquit him of culpable neglect.
