Mr. Quay, the late chairman of the National republican executive committee neither knows Mr. Harrison or Mr. Cleveland. It is probable that he will soon cultivate Mr. Harrison's acquaintance. He is opposed to civil service reform.

THE NEXT HOUSE

Is still in dispute. The democrats have one more than was granted from California; and, according to the way votes were cast in the 5th district of this State, it may not be certain that Mr. John Morehead Brower will represent that district. A large number of votes were cast for J. N. Brower. and as the canvassing board cannot "go behand the returns" if enough were so cast to change the result the certificate would have to be given to Mr. Merchead. The majority will be close, either way, less than five, we are sure.

THANKSGIVING.

In the woes of political defeat. some of us think there is no cause for thanksgiving; in the elation of political victory, some think there cannot be found too much exultation of thankfulness. In the terrors of the pestilence there are many who think the occasion is one of humiliation and prayer; there are others who the Bowels, Kidneys, Liver, and Stoniaci think in escaping these terrors there is most abundant cause for thankfumess and for the most open expression of it. There are those who in the loss of their year's labor by flood and storm are so bowed down by calamity that thankfulness under such circumstances is ironical; there are others who in the exuberance of their crops are lifted up to the highest degree of elation. So it goes; one uplifted, the other depressed, and in all is found a compensation of balances; all are not blessed, all are not cursed. In a dependence upon a Providence whose ways may not be questioned, whose distribution of rewards and punishments we do not understand, we must stand re buked by our own ignorance, condemned by our own weakness. . It is enough to understand that we receive more than we deserve, escape more of evil than we have escape more of evil than we have drawn ourselves. If we could properly understand our relation to the Being who made us and provides for us, we might properly be more humble than we are, and accept with thankfulness what we receive, rather than rebel at what is denied us. In truth we get more than we merit, and we complain at the short comings of Divine Providence. when we should stand condemned in our own unworthiness. Let us join in the Thanksgiving with subdued and grateful hearts. HOW HE PEELS.
