DEAN OF DENTISTS.

DR. EVANS THE MOST EMINENT REP-RESENTATIVE OF HIS PROFESSION.

The Wealth Gained In Foreign Practice to Be Used In Establishing a College of Dentistry In Philadelphia-The Interesting Story of His Career.

The millions which Dr. Thomas W. Evans, the famous American dentist of Paris, has made in pulling out and fixing up the teeth of European royalty will eventually find their way to America, where they will be distributed and spent through educational and philanthropic enterprises.

On his recent visit to this country, which he made for the purpose of laying the body of his wife in the family burial plot in Philadelphia, the renowned dentist announced, through his New York attorney, that he proposed to devote the greater part of his immense fortune to the cause of education and philanthropy in America. The trip which he took through the west just before his return to Paris was made, it is understood, for the purpose of consulting various prominent persons in regard to his plans.

Dr. Evans' principal scheme is to found in Philadelphia a college of dentistry in which the cost of acquiring the profession will be reduced to the lowest point. His idea is to establish a national college of dentistry, with branches perhaps in several other cities He would have diplomas issued to graduates ... o had received a thorough training and who had passed a rigid examination.

The story of how Dr. Evans rose from the obscurity of a dentist in a small Pennsylvania town to be the dean of his profession throughout the world reads more like a romance than a recital of facts. It is a tale of dentistry extraordinary. Thomas Wiltburger Eyans was born in Philadelphia about 76 years ago. Early in his career Dr. Evans learned the silversmith's trade, but he was still under age when he entered a dentist's office. Having decided to adopt the profession he took a course in medicine and surgery. At the age of 18 he was awarded a special medal by the Franklin institute of Philadelphia for artistic work in filling teeth with gold foil. A few years later his experiments in mechanical dentistry resulted in the discovery of vulcanized rubber, which is now employed for so many purposes, but which he first made use of in the manufacture of plates for mounting artificial teeth.

Dr. Evans had practiced several years in Lancaster, Pa., and had acquired a wide reputation when he was sent for as the most competent American dentist to take part in an important consultation to be held in Paris. With his young wife he crossed the ocean, little thinking what a long stay he was to make in the French capital or what fame and fortune awaited him. His knowledge and skill were immediately recognized and in a short time he found himself the most famous dentist in Paris.

Among his early clients was Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, the prince president of the French republic. The two became intimate friends and when the prince became Napoleon III the dentist of the new emperor suddenly found himself with a list of patients which included representatives of every royal house in Europe. One family in which he was most welcome was that of the present king of Denmark, who was then living in straitened circumstances in Halle. He was the special favorite of the children of this monarch. One of these children is today Princess of Wales, another the empress of Russia and a third the king of Greece.

It was through the friendship of Napoleon III that Dr. Evans, by means of judicious investments in Paris real estate, was able to accumulate the big fortune which he now possesses. Being a close friend of so many monarchs Dr. Evans could hardly escape connection with many diplomatic incidents of historic interest. It was he who saved the Empress Eugenie from the Paris mob, taking her in a carriage from the garden gate of the palace at the risk of his own life. It was Dr. Evans, too, who induced Louis Napoleon not to recognize the Confederacy during the civilwar. During the Franco-Prussian war he was one of the few men who could pass from camp to camp and who enjoyed the confidence and friendship of the opposing | Z, if the heart has not been impressed by rulers. He used this influence and privi- the sentiment of the song, which they

The palatial residence of Dr. Evans, situated in the most aristocratic section of Paris, is filled with costly mementos from his royal friends. He has a collection of over 200 orders and medals which he has received at various times, and they include insignias of every rank, from that of the cross of the French Legion of Honor, of which he is a grand commander, down to one of the first medals struck off in commemoration of Queen Victoria's jubilee. Although he has been a resident of Paris for more than half a cenutry, Dr. Evans is still a loyal American, and in his home prominent residents of the United States have always been cordially received. He has no children, and the recent death of his wife left him with no immediate family. A small portion of his many millions will be distributed among distant relatives, but the bulk of his fortune will be spent in aiding the young men of his native land to secure a higher education than their own means would allow.
