A STATUE OF GOLD

For Which McKinley is Requested to Pose.

New York, Nov. 25.—F. F. Higby of Chicago, left here today for Washington to obtain the consent of President McKinley to pose for a life size statue in solid gold to be sent to the Paris exposition in 1900. Mr. Higby has been retained by a syndicate of western millionaires to furnish the statue. It will contain bullion to the value of $1,050,000. Higby designed and built the Montana silver statue exhibited at the World's Fair.

Crabtree.

Crabtree, N. C., Nov. 25.—A revival meeting closed at this place yesterday which had been in progress about ten days. Much interest was manifested in the meeting and the church is revived greatly.

Fire has been in the mountains for more than ten days, and several hundred panels of fence, enclosing pasture lands, have been burned. The fire is the most violent and destructive that has ever been known in this part of the country. In the prohibition county of Haywood there are two government distilleries running, and when the gaugers come they find no whiskey on hand, but plenty of drunken men instead. A citizen of this community went into a tobacco barn last week and found a blockade running in open daylight.

A NEW KIPLING NOVELLETTE.

About the last story published from the pen of the master Kipling appeared in the August number of McClure's magazine, and his next story is announced for publication in the Christmas number of the same periodical. It is a long story—practically a novelette—but it will be published complete in one number. In it Kipling returns to India—the ground, undoubtedly, on which he is most at his ease and most engaging to his readers. The story is described as the narrative of the experience of a young English officer whose family had done their duty in India without noise or brag, but with great efficiency and bravery, through a number of generations and who on taking up the family work found himself compelled to give up to a very high family tradition in the matter of shooting tigers and laying down the law to the native tribe of Bhils. Especially exacting on him was the final disposition of certain "clouded" tiger, entailing a series of great adventures. A novel experiment has been tried in illustrating the story for McClure's. Two well known artists have collaborated, one chosen for his personal familiarity with India, and the other for his general skill in embodying forth imaginative personages, actions and scenes.

The Burglar.

One of the most meritorious attractions that has come to the Grand this season was the A. Q. Scammon company's production of "The Burglar" yesterday, with matinee and evening performance. The play itself is a literary work, and the company is entirely capable of giving it a worthy production. Both performances yesterday received a flattering attendance.

The cast is headed by Mr. Horace Mitchell, a young actor, who gave a strong interpretation of his part, that of the burglar. Mace Greenleaf was the typical editor, and F. E. Cooke as the retired merchant, and Donald Bowles as the young law student were very fine. The latter possesses a good voice. Miss Maud Sinclair rendered the part of "Mrs. Lewis" with fine dramatic force, and Misses Phillips Morton and Edna Phillips in their parts were capable and clever. A pleasing feature was the presence of little Miss Reba Kaufman, who is a valuable adjunct to the company.

The death of Rev. Dr. J. Henry Smith, at Greensboro, is greatly deplored by the Presbyterians. He was one of the foremost men in that church. He was born at Lexington, Va., in 1820. For many years he had been the pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Greensboro.
