Buck Clothing and Shoe Co.

As it is well known over the country that my branch store, 18 North Main St., was consumed by fire, I sold all the goods out at auction to close out all the damaged goods. Therefore I wrote to my Northern buyers to buy me a consisting of Clothing, Shoes and Gent's Furnishing Goods, for the cash, and they struck a big bargain. They bought a bankrupt stock at 60 cents on the dollar, and the goods are arriving daily and will be placed on my counters. Come early and secure your bargains before the goods are picked over. A special sale of 344 men's suits worth $6 to $7; our price $3.94.

attached and marked exhibit "A." The re-opening of this award for the purpose of interpretation or contradiction would practically have the effect of nullifying and vacating the entire award, a thing which the supreme court has expressly decided in Henry vs. Hilliard cannot be done. It is apparent from the record that even the dissatisfied cestui-qui-trusts could not agree in their statements. It appears from the record that one of the cestui-qui-trusts, James Atkins, made affidavit that he never consented to the confirmation of the award by Starbuck, judge, and that he had no opportunity to see or examine the award; whereas, the affidavit of W. W. Stringfield of the date of December 4th, 1896, declares that the said Atkins knew of and assented to the said award, and that all the parties in the case were represented by counsel, and the counsel all knew of the said report and its confirmation, and that some were dissatisfied with the said award, but accepted the same and its confirmation as binding. With reference to the arbitration, he declares it was for the purpose of expediting settlements and getting the numerous matters and items adjudged by the said arbitrators who were chosen for that purpose, and that all of the said parties not only consented to, but urged the filing of said award at spring term of 1895 of Swain as aforesaid, and that the same should then be confirmed by the said judge in this connection. This affidavit Stringfield declares that, "further and unfairly ties up the money in the trustee's hands which ought to be disbursed as ordered by the court, and further says that the said award, after full investigation, he believes does full and substantial justice to each and all of the parties." Subsequently, on the 18th day of November, 1897, the same affiant declares that, "this award which he at first supposed to be just and intelligible, has now become upon closer inspection a conglomerated mass of errors and inconsistencies, if not frauds." It is manifest that this award can never be construed to suit all of the conflicting interests in this cause. Clearly it is res judicata and the trustee should have disbursed the funds in his hands under the Jones-Boone award. It appears that the trustee has not only refused to make such disbursements under the Jones-Boone award, but that he has also failed to make any return of his trust since September, 1896. It further appears that he has now a considerable amount of money on hand treating the certificate of the Bank of Waynesville as so much cash in his credit, and that he may at any time realize a large amount of money, $40,000 or more, from the W. W. Cooke land option, and that he has also collected $300 per month on account of the said option, and that his bond is only for $10,000—a small amount in comparison to the funds he has on hand, and may at any time receive in his capacity as trustee. Upon these facts as found it is thereupon ordered, adjudged and decreed that the said R. D. Gilmer, trustee, be required to increase his bond as said trustee from $10,000 to $30,000, the said bond to be filed with the clerk of the court of Haywood county within ten days of the filing of this decree. As it does not appear that the act of Gilmer, trustee, in not having disbursed the funds in his hands under the Jones-Boone award is wilful or intended to be in disregard of the orders of the court made hereto in this cause, but arises out of a misapprehension of his duties under the said award, and as it further appears that the said Gilmer has been active and diligent in collecting all monies due his estate, and has evinced great tact and skill in adjusting the many complicated matters growing out of this long drawn out litigation, the motion for a temporary receiver is for the present refused and the motion for the same continued till February 10th, 1898, to the end that the trustee may disburse to the cestui-qui-trusts under the terms of the Jones-Boone award such funds as he may have in his hands, or may come into his hands by that date. So much of the order heretofore made by this court relating to the said Gilmer, trustee, from straining the said monies due the estate or collecting the affairs of the said estate either in his capacity as administrator or trustee or restraining other parties from paying said Gilmer, trustee, monies belonging to, or due the said estate, is herewith dissolved. The costs of this proceeding will be paid by the defendant Gilmer, trustee, as aforesaid, the same to be taxed by the clerk of the superior court of the county of Haywood. This, 10th December, 1897.

ANTIPATHY AMONG ANIMALS.

Different Species of Beasts Entertain a Distlike for Each Other.

The likes and dislikes of animals are unaccountable. Some horses take a violent prejudice against certain men, even though they are treated kindly and though the man's moral character is fair. Between the cat and dog there is a violent antipathy, which, however, is not infrequently displayed by mutual respect, and even affection in exceptional cases. The elephant hates dogs and rats. Cows dislike dogs, and so do sheep, and what seems stranger, are particularly partial to bears. On the other hand, horses loathe and detest camels and refuse to be decently civil to them after long acquaintance. They even hate the place where camels have been, which seems to be carrying race prejudice to an extreme.

Evolutionists are accustomed to explain these instinctive feelings as survivals of ancestral enmities dating from the days when one race preyed on the other. This would account for the natural enmity of owls to dogs, for when cows were wild they were obliged to defend their calves from bands of predatory wild dogs. But why should the horse like dogs? It is but the other day that the wild horses organized to defend their colts from wolves on our western prairies. What could the ancestral horse have had against the ancestral camel of a million years ago? Above all, why should the horse approve of the bear? It must be that the horse has a dormant sense of beauty and of humor. The ideal of the horse is grace, combined with strength. He disapproves from the bottom of his nature of the hopelessly vulgar, awkward and unattractive camel. The bear, he sees at once, though clumsy, is unpretentious, truthful and not devoid of a sense of humor. The dog he recognizes as a good fellow, companionable and unselfish. He therefore forgets his ancestral predaceous habits. A strong bond between the dog and the horse is that they are both fond of sport, whereas a camel would not go an inch to see the best race that was ever run.

The horse does seem a little prejudiced in the case of the camel, but it is a fine, aristocratic, unreasoning prejudice he has. And we like him for himself and for showing that the evolutionists cannot explain all the sentiments of a refined and highly organized animal. Man, of course, they can account for in every particular.

Paper Gas Pipes.
Paper gas pipes are now made. Manila paper is cut in strips equaling in width the length of the pipe to be made. These are passed through a vessel filled with melted asphalt and then wrapped firmly and uniformly round an iron core until the required thickness is attained. These pipes are claimed to be perfectly gas tight and are said to be much cheaper than iron pipes.
