This Date In History-Feb. 6. 1605—Princess Anne, and later Queen Anne, daughter of James II, born; died 1714. 1778—France officially acknowledged independ ence of United States and promised an alliance, a decisive event in the Revolution. Previous to the treaties of alliance and of amity and commerce signed on this date the French government had secretly encouraged the colonies in their war for freedom by furnishing them arms and stores, without which successful war would have been impossible. Lafayette had already offered his sword, and soon after the treaty a French fleet from Toplon ar-rived in the Delaware. In the siege of Yorktown 57 French ships took part; also 7,000 French soldiers.

Dr. Von Ruck of the Winyah Sanitarium has taken very commendable action in preserving the carcass of a dog which a few days ago bit several children, and, it is alleged, four or five dogs, and in writing to the Pasteur institute in New York to inquire if, in case the carcas is shipped to them, they will make the necessary tests to find out if the animal was afflicted with rables. The Winyah physicians state that they could make these tests, but with less certain results, or at least with more detay than would occur if they were made by those who are specialists in this work, and they strongly recommended that the work be done by Dr. Gibler. There be some expense involved in the test at New York, and as it will be the interest of public safety, at should be morne by the authorities of the city. It seems to us the imperative duty of the board of health to investigate the matter fully so that if it is proved that the case was one of hydrophobia the proper precautions may be immediately taken to prevent further communication of the disease

"Fall River with its two million spintiles," said Capt. Smyth, "has only about one hundred thousand spindles in the outh competing for the class of goods they turn out. New Bedford has no competition from the South as yet for the producie of its mills. It will take another generation before the South will offer commedition sufficiently strong to make any appreciable inroads upon the markets which are controlled by the New England milis. The competition of Couthern mills is talked of more to influence legislation in New England than from any real feeling of

He admitted that the South controls markets on coarse cotton goods and that an evolution was in progress in the operatives of the Southern mills. The operatives have not as yet reached that expert stage where they can produce the results obtained in New England. It is coming, however, and new mills built in the South of recent years are for finer goods. lan interesting fact to which he called attention is that cotton mills in the South have been instrumental in reducing filiteracy and enabling people to live better and more comfortably. "The operatives," he said "originally came from the farms and cash payment for work was a novelty. Schools are maintained for their children and our company supports a school with an attendance of seven hundred children. We also maintain a library with 3,500 volumes. "RELIGION AND POLITICS." The New York Sun thinks the religious press is declining and that its decline dates from the time religious papers began to take a hand in politics. Are politics and the One True BLOOD Purifier. religion, then, so entipodal that no editor can deal with both. If so it would seem that the times are strangely out of joint. If the government of the country and the religion of the country have nothing in common there must be sham or trickery in one or both and either religious editors are not fit to deal with politics or politics are not fit for religious edito s to deal with. Whichever is the case there is something to be remedied—editor or politics. If it is the editor that is not fit to deal with the "science of government" then it would hardly seem that he were fit to deal with the more portentous matters of man's spiritual government. If politics are too bad for a good man and a wise editor to meddle with; then, to speak paradoxically, we should say the more he and his kind meddled with them the better. Redigion is not a thing altogether of texts, hymns and church going. To be real it must be practical. We suspect that if any religious paper has suffered through meddling in politics it has suffered because it was not practically religious and did not appeal to practically religious readers. Life is not divided up into compariments, one labelled religion" another "politics," another "business," another "amusement" and so on. Life is one and religion to be practical and real should be its inspiring molive. The ten commandments were the law code of the old Hebrew nation. The Golden Rule is the practical rule of action for individuals and nations.
