Report of the Chemists of North Carolina Experiment Station-Powders Containing Alum.

The chemists of the North Carolina Agricultural Experiment station, Prois. W. A. Withers and J. A. Bizzell, have recently collected and analyzed the baking powders sold in North Carolina and the result of their work is given in Bulletin No. 155 recently published by the experiment staltion at Raleigh for general information. The names of the pewders reported as containing alum and their manufacturers are as follows: BAKING POWDERS CONTAINING

BAKING POWDERS TESTED.

ALUM. OLD DOMINION Contains Alum Old Dominion Mfg. Co., Richmond, Va. CAMPBELL'S Contains Alum The Potter-Parlin Co., New York. Smith, Horpel & Co., Baltimore. J. D. & R. S. Christian Co., Richmond DAVIS' O. K. Contains Alum R. B. Davis & Co., New York. Patapsco Baking Powder Co., Baltimore ONE SPOON Contains Alum L. & N. Taylor Mfg. Co., New York. BLUE RIBBON Contains Alum Blue Ribbon Baking Powder Co., Richmond. RAILROAD Constains Alum Morehouse Mfg. Co., Savannah, Ga. The report states that the residue left in the bread from alum is soluble in the juices of the body, and is thus absorbed by it, a fact which many manufacturers

deny. The use of alum in bread making is prohibited in countries having food adulteration laws. It quotes the opinton of Dr. Danglish, that the ezect of alum upon the system is that of an astringent, producing constipation and deranging the process of absorption.

The report recommends that the sale of baking powder should be so regulated that consumers may be placed in possession of knowledge as to which are the alum brands.

GRAVEYARDS EVERYWHERE.

It is said the opposition to railroad building in China grows out of superstitious objection to the road crossing the graves of dead Chinamen. This is regarded as a sacrilege, and, it is believed by the Chinamen, interferes with the peaceful rest of their departed. have recently been brought out in an English translation, by Harper & Brothers. it is revealed that Captain Dreyfus, when all hope seemed lost, was resolved to commit suicide, and that he was only restrained from this purpose by the entreaties of his wife.

She exacted from him the promise that whatever came, however hopeless and humiliating his let might become, their he would continue to live for her sake. The letter which was written in connection with this purpose shows how keenly Dreyfus was suffering, and what an effort the promise mut have cost him. "I will not tell you," he writes, "what I have suffered today. Your grief is great enough already. I will not augment it.

"In promising you to live, in promising you to resist until my name is rehabilitated, I have made the greatest sacrifice that a man of deep feeling of heart, an upright man, from whom his honor has been 'taken, can make. My God, let not my physical strength abandon me! My spirit is unshaken; a conscience that has nothing with which to reproach me upholds me, but I am coming to the end of patience and of my physical strength. After having consecrated all my life to honor, never having deserved reproach. to be here, to have borne the most wounding affront that can be afflicted upon a soldier!

"Oh, My darling, do everything in the world to find the guilty one; do not relax your efforts for one instant. That is my only hope in the terrible misfortune which pursues me."

One of the most delicious breakfast foods that has been placed on the market is Grape-Nuts, the pre-digested food that is having such a wide sale. Four tea- spoonfuls of this novelty, with a little cream, makes an ideal meal to shart the day's duties on. There is as much nour- ishment in one pound of Grape-Nuts as ten pounds of meat. The delicate sweet flavor is that of grape-sugar.
