CHEROKEE INDIANS HAVE AN ELECTION

SAMPSON OWL, A DEMOCRAT, WAS ELECTED CHIEF BY A SMALL MAJORITY.

But Political Considerations Cut Little Figure, It Is Said.

Council for the Eastern Band Has Passed Upon a Number of Legislative Matters—Election May Be Contested on Irregularities.

George H. Smathers and his secretary, Mr. Williams, have returned from a trip through the western counties, including a short stay at the reservation of the eastern band of Cherokee Indians.

The council of the band has been in session and taken action on a number of matters. Sometime ago the band sold some timber lands for $2,000, and the council passed an act directing the distribution of the amount, and paid the chief of the council for his services.

Matters are running very smoothly with the Indian school, of which Professor H. W. Spray is the principal. One of the teachers, a lady, who has taught in the Indian Territory, was asked regarding the aptness of her pupils. She replied that the Indians were about on an equality with the white children in their faculty for learning. The school has a resident physician, and Dr. Wortsell, until recently with the pension bureau at Washington, now has this position.

The chief and assistant chief of the eastern band of Cherokees are elected every four years. At the same time the members of the council are elected for a term of two years. At the recent election Sampson Owl was elected chief and Stillwell Saunooka, who served as chief from 1891 to 1895, was elected assistant chief. While local issues figured very largely in the election, the result was something like a democratic victory, as the new chief is of that party. As proof of the fact that politics had no weight, it is pointed out that the democratic chief was elected by only three majority, while the republican assistant chief, worsted his antagonist by some seventy votes.

There is some talk of not seating Sampson Owl, not because he is not as wise as an owl, but because of some alleged irregularities in the election. It is said that some of the Swain county judges were not chosen in accordance with the Indian constitution. If the disputed townships should be thrown out, the democratic candidate for the office of chief, Jesse Reed, would be elected by one vote. If there is no evidence of open fraud, however, no such step will be taken, as the council will attach no great importance to mere technicalities.

The timber sale mentioned has been under dispute several years, but it is now believed that at least a part of the proceeds of the sale will, through an order of the court, be distributed. The case of the United States against D. L. Boyd and others, involving the status of the Indians, is now pending before the Supreme court, and will probably be argued this winter. The case will be argued by George H. Smathers, legal representative of the land of Cherokee Indians, and Louis M. Bourne for the Dixon & Mason lumber company, who are claiming damages against the government. The interests of the government will be looked after by some one attached to the department of justice. It will be remembered that the United States circuit court of appeals, Judge Goff delivering the opinion of the court, rendered a decision during the November term of '97, holding that these Indians are not citizens of the United States or North Carolina, but were wards of the nation. The principal object of the appeal by the defendants to the United States Supreme court is to secure a decision setting the status of the Indians.

About fifteen hundred people are now included in the band. All the male population over eighteen years of age, may vote.

DR. AMBLER RETURNS FROM WESTERN TRIP.

Thinks Western North Carolina Rivals Yellowstone Park in Beauty.

Dr. C. P. Ambler returned yesterday from a six weeks' hunting trip in Wyoming, Idaho and Yellowstone National Park. He traveled over 400 miles on horseback, and while he has gone secured many valuable pointers on the national park which will be of service in the movement which has just been inaugurated here toward getting a southern national park. Dr. Ambler says that although the Yellowstone park has some advantages, in the geyser and hot springs and higher mountains, in point of real beauty the country does not compare with Western North Carolina. The forest preserves are not preserved in the sense we use the term, as their timber is mostly pine, and of no commercial value, while we have a great deal of fine lumber and pretty streams, which should be preserved. He is convinced that the south is more entitled to a national park than he ever was before. Dr. Ambler has been one of the leaders in the movement since it was started here, and has learned considerably in regard to continuing the work successfully.

Dr. Ambler killed two elks, three bears, a lynx, a deer, two coyotes, an antelope, a badger, a martin, a wolverine and geese, ducks, grouse, sage hens and prairie chickens innumerable. They also caught a large number of trout. He will have the elks' heads mounted by a taxidermist in Livingston and will keep the hides of the others.

Dr. Ambler had letters from ex-Secretary of State William R. Day, Secretary of War Root and Assistant Secretary of War Meiklejohn. He left the railroad at Rawlins and went across Red Desert, Wyoming. He crossed the Shoshone valley and reservation to Fort Washakie. Then up Wind river and over the Tootocotee Pass, which is 12,000 feet high, to Buffalo creek. His hunting was done on the Jackson Hoar basin, at the junction of Buffalo creek and Snake river. He came out through Yellowstone park by way of Cinnabar, Montana. A government pack train went with him for a week over the Shoshone reservation. Captain Brown, of Yellowstone park, sent a detachment to meet him at Snake river and accompany him through the park.

His Translation.
A good chairman story comes from the Antipodes. A dignified elder of a church was presiding at a charitable concert. A Miss Brown was to sing "Ora Pro Nobis" but at the last moment she changed her mind, and a note was passed to the chairman intimating that she would give "The Song That Reached My Heart."
He therefore made the following announcement, "Miss Brown will now sing 'Ora Pro Nobis,' which, being translated, means 'The Song That Reached My Heart.'"—London Chronicle.
