These are some of the milder symptoms; they increase in severity, finally attacking the vital organs; the body is tortured with rheumatic pains and covered with offensive eating sores. It is a peculiar poison, and so highly contagious that an innocent person handling the same articles used by one infected with this loathsome disease, may be inoculated with the virus. It can be transmitted from parent to child, appearing as the same disease or in a modified form - like Eczema or Scrofula.

Many an old sore or stubborn skin trouble appearing in middle life, is due and traceable to blood poison contracted in early life. You may have taken potash and mercury faithfully for two or three years and thought you were cured, but you were not, for these poisonous minerals never cure this disease; they drive it from the outside, but it is doing its work on the inside, and will show up again sooner or later. You may not recognize it as the same old taint, but it is. S. S. S. has cured thousands of cases of Contagious Blood Poison, and it will cure you. One might think that watering pot were made simply of tin, iron, and zinc and so they are, most of them, bu' there are also watering pots made o! china and of the blue ware of Delft There are produced in France watering pots of fine china, in sizes half pints to quarts, which are made all in one piece, including handles, spout and sprin kler, and in white and other colors, and decorated, which sell at $4 to $20 each A number of such sprinklers were imported a while ago, but the demand for them was not sufficient to warrant con-

United States Hydrographic Office Preparing to Search for a Lost Island.

One whole island has disappeared from the Pacific Ocean, and a party of officials from the United States Hydrographic Office are about to start out in search of it. If it has entirely disappeared from the surface of the globe they desire to wipe it off the maps and charts. If it has simply changed its location or if the position assigned to it has been the wrong one they will correct the mistake. Whatever may be the explanation the case as it now stands teries of the year, and they propose to solve it before they return.

The little body of land that has of late been the cause of so much discus- (sion in naval and shipping circles has long been known (; Morrell Island. For years it has occupied a place upon all well constructed maps, and many a seaman who has sailed the Pacific has tales to tell of this little island that has been seen rearing its rocky headlands far out in the great ocean.

The history of Morrell Island has always been somewhat a romantic one. It has long had its place on the charts and has been reported as sighted again and again, but in captains' logs it has always been a question whether or not it had any actual existence. While not generally known, it is admitted in official circles that there are undoubtedly N. A. Reynolds..... 100 a number of islands charted on the maps which exist only upon paper.

seen the cliffs and the low lands and the protecting guard of reef. Others have witnessed the sea fowl and sea elephants that lined the coast when Captain Morrell first sighted it three-quarters of a century ago, and, as the result, it is only within a comparatively short time that its existence has been questioned.

It was only a short time ago that Captain Cobb, of one of the Pacific Mail steamers, reported that he had passed City of Pekin, could obtain no trace nothing; yours is expensive. of the island, although he made a special effort to locate it while on his way from the Sandwich Islands to China.

Still later several inquisitive geographers who met at Honolulu chartered a vessel and went out to look for it, but, like all other recent investigators, they failed to find the land of which they were in search.

At present the officials of the Hydrographic Office will not commit themselves to an opinion as to whether the island ever existed or was simply another instance in which navigators have been mistaken by a mirage.

If the island was of the nature dehave sunk beneath the waters of the ocean and completely disappeared, or it is also possible that the discoverer may have been mistaken in his latitude, in which case it is possible that he may have been some hundreds of miles to the northeast of the spot in which he imag ined himself to be. If this theory is correct it is not impossible that he may nave mistaken Bryce or Pearl Island or -ome one of the Midway Islands for the one, that he described. While such a mistake would be scarcely possible today, with our more perfect instruments, the navigators of half a century ago made even greater errors.

The First Patent on Matches. Before 1833, when wooden matches with phosphorus were made in Vienna, people were dependent upon flint and steel to secure a light. The irst patent for a phosphorus match in the United States was taken out in 1836 by A. D. Philipps of Springfield, Mass. For many years people refused to use them, but by 1845 the ill smelling and clumsy old tinder boxes were generally discarded and are preserved, like snuffboxes, as curiosities .- Chicago Chronicle.

The case of Morrell Island is somewhat different, as there is more reason what different, as there is more reason to believe that at some time it existed in the Pacific. The island was discovered and reported by Captain Morrell. of the whaling schooner Tartat, more than seventy-five years ago, and since that time it has been regarded as one of the possessions of the United States. According to Captain Morrell the island was first sighted in 29 degrees 57 minutes north latitude, and 174 degrees 31 minutes east longitude. He described the island as being extremely flat except on the south coast, where a high rocky cliff faced the north bound vessels. At some points the land was so low that the water must have entirely covered it at high tide. Extending around it were reefs for about fifteen miles to the west and thirty miles in the southerly direction. The island itself was about four miles in circumference, and close to it
