

GLIMPSES OF LIFE IN THE OLD NORTH STATE

Floating Items That Show the Trend of Industrial and Social Progress.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN THE LAND OF THE SKY

Gleanings From the Columns of Local Papers in Various Towns of State.

We regret to learn that ex-Sheriff James M. Collins died suddenly at his home Wednesday at Culberson. He was sitting in a chair and got up as if to go to his bed, taking only a few steps, when he turned to his chair and sat down, dying immediately. He was sheriff of Cherokee county for four years, and was a prominent citizen. He was buried Thursday with Masonic honors.—Cherokee Scout.

A recent Salisbury despatch told of the elopement of Daisy Lingle, a young girl of that place with W. L. Barrett of Charlotte. Later developments appear to show that Barrett seduced the girl under promise of marriage and warrants have been issued for him by the father, A. S. Lingle. The girl was but 17 years old and no one knows where she is.

Dr. Thomas W. Lingle, a native of this county who took such high rank in scholarship during his collegiate career and who has since taken high rank in the world of letters, has decided to go to Brazil. He has received a very flattering proposition to go to that country and occupy a chair in a leading institution of learning.—Salisbury Sun.

Mr. M. A. Proffit, lineman for the Western Union Telegraph company noticed his little child yesterday picking continually at its nose. He looked in the little one's nose but could see nothing and decided to take it to his family physician. The doctor made an examination, with the result that he removed a screw an inch long. It had been in the child's nose so long that it had rusted.—Wilmington Messenger.

A Wilmington special says: The crew of Mr. Farrow, a fisherman on Mosonboro Sound, on Saturday caught a sword fish sixteen feet long. The monster's saw was five feet long and he pulled the scales at 300 pounds. He was caught in a one and a half inch mesh net and when the crew got him in the sein he made the water fly in his desperate efforts to escape. He cut the net to pieces but became so entangled that he was hauled ashore.

Mr. J. C. Furr, of near Georgeville, was in the city today. He says he took down his reaping cradle, brushed off the dust and rust and sallied forth to the harvest field to put in the first reaping of the season on Monday. When the evening came 75 shocks cast their long shadows to the eastward. He had cut and feels sure that he could have cut 100 had he not done the shocking.—Concord Standard.

A. Troutman, N. C., correspondent writes: Mr. Frank Robbins, a farmer living near here, has a cow badly affected with rabies. This morning some very strange actions of the animal were noticed and shortly after this she began attacking everything in her reach. She chased away all the other stock and the ran after the poultry. After the cow had run blindly over several fences, Mr. Laurence Hicks, who handled a rope in Texas, succeeded in throwing a lariat over her head and with the assistance of a half dozen other men confined the cow in a stall, where she has since been having fits and showing all other signs of a genuine case of hydrophobia.

In the election at Sanford Monday for water works bonds to the amount of fifteen thousand dollars, the bonds carried by 183 votes. There was but one vote against them. Mt. Airy will vote on the bond issue for water works and electric lights on the 24th inst., and that it will be carried by a large majority is now no longer a question of doubt. The opposition was confined to a limited few. The North Carolina towns that are voting improvements are too numerous to mention.

A man can be friendly with all the world if he only keeps on speaking terms with his liver.

HE IS A WONDER.

All we see Mr. C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Iowa, as he is now, cheerful, erect, vigorous, without an ache, could hardly believe he is the same man who, a short time ago, had to sit in a chair, propped up by cushions, suffering intensely from an aching back, in agony he tried to stoop—all caused by chronic kidney trouble, that no medicine helped till he used Electric Bitters and was wholly cured by three bottles. Positively cures Backache, Nervousness, Loss of Appetite, all Kidney troubles. Only 50c at all drug stores.

THE FLOOD SUFFERERS IN MITCHELL COUNTY

A letter received last week by Mr. Henry C. Dockery, of Raleigh, from Mr. W. S. Hyams, secretary to Senator Pritchard, gives some idea of the loss and suffering in Mitchell county. Says Mr. Hyams: "No man can tell the ruin and devastation of the awful day. To the loss of property amounting to not less than one million dollars in our small county must be added the complete wreck and ruin of our county roads. God alone knows what is the end in store for those who have lost all they possessed. No one in the county escaped loss either directly or indirectly. We have very few wealthy men in the county, which makes it exceedingly hard to raise funds to relieve the distress. "Crops are gone and unless a merciful providence stays the frosts of fall the misery and want will continue. The people of the state, if they knew our condition, would, I believe, send substantial aid and send it promptly. Those of us who have something are dividing with our neighbors."

DISCOVERIES IN JAMESTOWN.

Mr. John Tyler, Jr., an engineer of Richmond, has been making recent excavations in Jamestown, Va., which have brought to light some interesting facts. The foundations and interior of the old church have been unearthed and the debris under which it was buried removed. In the interior was found a tomb bearing the inscription: "Here lieth interred the body of John Clough, minister, who departed this 11th of January, 16—"

Among the many interesting discoveries which have been made, says the Richmond Times, is that of the "Knight's Tomb." This is not only of interest as having been the only old sepulchral brass in America, but because it seems almost certain that the tomb must be that of Governor Sir George Yeardley, who died in 1627, and if this supposition is correct, the present ruins cover the site where there was a church as early as 1608. Here, doubtless, Pocahontas was baptized and married, and here in 1619 the first American legislative assembly met. The inner foundation, which Mr. Tyler believes to have been a brick underpinning of a wooden building, points to the same conclusion as that derived from the tomb.

ASHEVILLE PICTURES AT PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION

Other North Carolina Exhibits—Capt. Hobson's Suggestion.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 11.—Thanks to the enterprise, liberality and business acumen of the Southern Railroad, the Southern States, through which that great railroad system runs all have a small exhibit in the Agriculture Building at the Pan-American Exposition. The names of these states are emblazoned in golden letters high up on the wall space occupied by the exhibit of the Southern Railway.

The exhibit was installed in the Agricultural Building by Mr. Green of Washington, D. C., who performed the same service at the Paris Exposition. I was gratified this morning to see in it very fine pictures of the superb scenery along the banks of the Swannanoa and French Broad rivers, the chateau of Mr. George Vanderbilt from several points of view, the mountains around Hot Springs and a view of Round Knob, nicely framed and advantageously hung. In this building agricultural products from the states of Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas were artistically grouped. While it is impossible to do justice to any of these states in the small space necessarily allotted to the Southern Railway, this exhibit is a great deal better than nothing. On the desk were scattered a number of very attractive pamphlets showing the resources of this fertile section. The exhibit is temporarily in charge of Mr. H. A. Haynes of Boston, Mass. Mr. Green is expected back next week. The literature, which is given out freely to all who pass by, is superbly illustrated. There are a great many pictures of the cotton mills in the several states. There is a fine pamphlet on the city of Raleigh which dwells particularly on the tobacco and cotton mill industries of North Carolina. It shows the state as a producer of all the cereals and fruits, cotton, etc., etc. Special mention is also made of the fine climate of North Carolina. I am sure the state owes the consideration shown her here mainly to the influence of Colonel Alexander B. Andrews, first vice-president of the Southern Railroad, than whom no man in the history of the South has done more for her material advancement. This is especially true as regards his native state of North Carolina. If the citizens of the state do not know and appreciate this truth, they are unworthy of their part.

Mr. M. V. Richards of Washington City has proved himself an able and energetic First Lieutenant of Colonel Andrews in pushing to the front the vast resources of the South. This kind of service is worth more to the masses of the people than the impeachment of every Chief Justice and Associate Justice "for political purposes" in Dixie. Let them keep it up, and in time the whirl of cotton mills and tobacco factories will be heard throughout the land. Fine crops of fruit and cereals and all evidences of prosperity will be seen on every hand, when capital and skilled labor seek her fertile fields and unexcelled climates.

Independent of this exhibit, Alabama has one of the most artistic pavilions in the Agriculture building. Commissioner and Mrs. Gorman are both there and extend a genuine southern welcome to all visitors. I have never seen a better installation than the one which Mr. Gorman has made. He has constructed a model of the warship "Alabama," of samples of iron ore, pig iron, limestone, chert, gold ore, woods, fire brick, wire nails, drawheads, gearing wheels, steel castings, steel bars, steel plates, extra wide sheets of rolled iron, coal, coke, cotton seed oil, cotton seed meal, fertilizers, all from the state of Alabama. Several car loads of Alabama peaches have just arrived. Every body is surprised at the size, beauty of coloring and delicious flavor of this fruit. The peaches are free from insects and bruises and arrived in Buffalo in firm condition. These peaches command the admiration of the visitors who now throng the Agricultural building daily and linger long in this pavilion.

The state of Virginia shows twenty-five varieties of winter apples from the mountain section. These were sent by the Virginia State Horticultural society. In the Georgia exhibit one hundred varieties of cereals are shown, grown on one farm of twenty-five acres. Rice, cotton, wheat, corn, oats, hay, cotton seed are some of the one hundred varieties shown. This is a remarkable yield for twenty-five acres of land, especially in the South where land is cheap and labor plentiful. There is now on exhibition in the Florida exhibit a hybrid orange as large as grape fruit. The name of the fruit is "Nocatee."

Captain Hobson's memorial speech made at Detroit on May the 30th in which he advocated one Decoration Day for both the Federal and Confederate dead has provoked a great deal of favorable comment from the cosmopolitan newspapers North and South. The speech is full of patriotic sentiments and the young hero of the Merimac showed his courage in a remarkable degree by the suggestion that northern orators should go South and southern orators North to praise the bravery of both armies of the Civil war. Another courageous thing on the part of Capt. Hobson was the view he took of slavery in his Detroit speech. A great many old veterans shook him by the hand after the speech was finished and told him that his view of the slavery question was entirely new to them and that they cordially endorsed it from the beginning to the end. Capt. Hobson was introduced by the oldest veteran of the late war in Michigan, an officer of the G. A. R. In doing so this veteran remarked that as an American he was as proud of the bravery of Lee, Johnson and Jackson as he was of that of Grant, Sherman and Sheridan. At the close of the speech Capt. Hobson was given an ovation by the people of Detroit. An immense crowd assembled to hear him speak. Of course, he acquitted himself with credit to his section. He will spend the summer on duty at the Pan-American Exposition.
