NEW WAR CRAFT IS A WONDER

Son of Representative Mann of Chicago and Others Test the Efficiency of the Adder In Waters Near Washington-Vibration or Apparent Motion of Vessel Not Noticed.

Uncle Sam's new peacemaker, the Adder, is floating in the waters near Washington. By the courtesy of its officers many civilians have realized the dream of Jules Verne and have traveled beneath the waves, says the Chicago Record-Herald. Representative James R. Mann of Chicago and his young son have made a long trip under the water in the submarine wouder. The boy's story is very interesting. He is a youth of about twelve years, bright and observant, and is up to date the only child who has made the novel trip. He Bays:

"When we got down to Marshall Hall, the Adder was floating in the water. It looked like a big pecan nut, and when we got inside it seemed that we were in a pecan nut with windows. The crew consisted of only eight persons. They took papa, two other men and myself on to the round deck. We went down through a hole, which the sailors called a hatch. Then they closed the hole, and the light came in through a heavy glass window.

"The officer explained that water would be let into the places along the sides, and as it came in the boat set tled down slowly. When the round glass window was just touching the water, the boat began to rock in the funniest way. I suppose it felt like being in a cork. It moved with every little wave and just bobbed about. I was looking out of the window. The boat began to move through the water, and then the floor tilted under my feet. I could see the sky through the win-

The Daily Gazette

IS A SUBSCRIBER TO

he Unrivalled Press News Service of the Laffan News Bureau,

(New York Sun) and every topic of the world's news is not only fully covered in the telegraphic service furnished exclusively to the Gazette in Western North Carolina, but is most interestingly treated and its accuracy and reliability commends it strongly ahead of any press news service furnished to the daily newspapers.

In all the Western North Carolina towns the Gazette nas specical correspondents and the events especially of the mountain region, receive their due attention in its news columns.

Editorially, the Gazette advocates the progressive policies of the Republican national party. It stands uncompromisingly in opposition to dishonest elections, corrupt political combinations and extravagance in the administration of the affairs of this state, producing unnecessary tax burdens. The Gazette favors every movement that looks to the moral and educational betterment of the state and to a promotion of industrial progress. The Gazette looks open the building of good roads, the extension of the free public school system, and the rural free delivery of the mails as important factors in the upbuilding of the state.

dow. "The water came up and up, and then there was only a little piece left like a new moon. This went away, and we could not see a thing outside except yellow water. We went along with the deck tilted for awhile, and then it came flat again.

"Then we went along as if we were in a tunnel. The electric lights in the big nut were lighted, and we could see everything inside, but when you looked out of the windows it was all dark. You could not feel any motion. It was not like on a car, because there was no shaking. After we went under the water the boat stopped tumbling about, making us feel queer, and while the floor was flat we could not tell that we were moving along. "After awhile the floor tilted up again the other way. I was sitting on a camp stool and felt just when it tipped up. We went along this way for a time, and then the water outside the window got yellow again, and the window itself began to come up and the water to go down in front of it. "We went along a little ways, and then the boat dived, and it was dark again, and) in a little while we came up again. This last time we only went a few feet under water. I did not feel'the deck tilt so much as at first. "The officer said the first time the boat went down fifteen feet, and that was why we felt the deck tilt down so boat I remembered what it looked like op the water and felt just as if I were inside a big pecan nut. It felt just like magic. They say that this boat can come right up to a big warship and put a big torpedo under her and get away before the ship is blown up.

"It must be just as if a big fish were swimming under the water. I would not want to be in a ship when the Adder stole up to sting her. I was not a bit scared, because I was thinking of Captain Nemo and the Nautilus and how he used to sail under the sea."

Representative Mann was as much interested in the trip as his son. He said that during the experience he had very little sensation. "The remarkable part of the trip,' said Mr. Mann, "is the lack of vibration or apparent motion. Even on the best built steamboats in the smoothest water there is a sensation of movement, and one can feel the throb of the machinery.

"In the Adder after the boat settles down to her work everything is smooth and noiseless. It wabbles a little just after the cylinders are filled and the boat is just awash with the waves, but
