Whale and Elephant Meat

There is something unpleasant about the thought of eating whale meat, but it is said that the reality is very palatable. Japan has quite a trade it canned and salted whale meat, and there is to be a campaign to educate the European peoples to like it. Some whaling companies have distributed from their headquarters samples of canned whale meat, and those who nave eaten it describe it as tenderer than beef and much like it in taste Whale steak seems no queerer than Frankfort sausage made out of an elephant, which is what some German people have been eating. An enterprising butcher over there, hearing that an unruly elephant in the Ghent zoological gardens was to be killed, engaged the carcass. He made 2800 pounds of sausage out of it, and

The Key Under the Door. "It is customary for the back door key to be put halfway under the door so that I can reach it when coming off duty late at night," remarked an artist to a London Tit-Bits writer.

"The other morning at breakfast my landlady said to me, 'Do you know, I had an awful fright last night. I put the key halfway under the door, as usual, when, to my horror, I saw it drawn slowly out of right. drawn slowly out of sight. I of course thought some one had got the key and would unlock the door and come in. so I quickly bolted it and shouted through the keyhole, "My word, if you don't bring that key back!" Not daring to retire to rest, I sat quietly listening for a time. Then I got a table kulfe and pushed it under the door to see if the key had really been taken right away and to my surprise drew the key back again. So, very cautiously, I unlocked and unbolted the door, looked out and found not a burglar, but our own wicked cat, who, while sitting on the doorstep and seeing the key pushed under the door, must have drawn the key out of sight with ber paws, thinking I was playing with ber."

An American Joke From England. The typical American, says a contributor to the English Illustrated Magazine, although partial to making jokes, is often quick tempered and unthle to recognize a joke made by another, with results that are sometimes unpleasant.

Thus, a senator was once at a fashlonable dinner party at Washington when he was asked what fish he would take.

"Waal," he said, "I reckon I'll take plaice."

A wit who chanced to be present remarked, with a twinkle in his eye, 'Ah, senator, still a place seeker?"

"Yans," answered the senator, at the same time whipping out a revolver and shooting the wit dead, "but what's that to you, you dern'd stranger?" Afterward, when the joke was ex-
