CAVALRY ON THE MOVE

They Usually Travel at a Walk While on a March.

CAREFUL OF THEIR HORSES.

Reasons Why a Trot or a Gallop Might Prove Disastrous to the Animals. The Wagons and Supplies—Going In to Camp at Night.

People unfamiliar with the marching of troops frequently have the impression that mounted troops usually travel at a trot or gallop while on a march. In the cavalry, however, the gait is usually a walk.

There are reasons why it is not advisable for cavalry to trot or gallop on its road marches. The trooper is required to carry his three weapons—rifle, pistol and saber—over a hundred rounds of ball ammunition, his blanket, shelter tent, canteen, extra horse-shoes and sundry other articles, all of which add considerable weight to that of the trooper.

This weight is more, or less concentrated at comparatively few points instead of being uniformly distributed over the horse's back, so that at a trot, in spite of all that may be done to avoid it, the concussion at certain points is considerable and if kept up tends to develop blisters and sores on the horse's back, which may increase until the animal is no longer fit to use.

As the supply department furnishes but one horse to each trooper, differing in this respect from the mounts of the cowboy, who has as many as he wants, a constant vigilance is required on the part of the captain while on a long march in order to keep his horses serviceable and prevent his troopers from becoming dismounted.

This he accomplishes in part by marching at a walk whenever the circumstances will admit it. By means of the walk we make four miles an hour, says Captain William F. Flynn, U. S. A., in Forest and Stream, and as twenty-five miles is considered a fair day's march it is thus made in about seven hours, considering the necessary halts. The wagons carrying our supplies can go no faster than that, and there is rarely any advantage in reaching one's camping ground very much in advance of the wagons.

It is customary with individual tourists and campers upon making camp to turn their horses loose and either to watch them or else trust to luck in the matter of finding them again. We are not permitted to do this in the army. We always mean to provide grain for our animals on the march, and when we are unable to buy hay en route and thus have to rely upon grazing we put each horse out on a rope fastened to a picket pin driven in the ground.

On the march each mounted man carries his lariat and pin attached to his saddle and as soon as he unsaddles seeks a good grazing place for his horse and drives his pin in the ground. The horse thus gets a limited area upon which to graze. The pins are changed once or twice during the evening, and as the horse stays all night on his rope he gets a pretty fair chance of the grass, after all, and when we want him in the morning we can find him.

The horses having been unsaddled and disposed of, the men then put up their shelter tents. A shelter tent is a convenient little affair made in two halves to accommodate nicely two soldiers. Each soldier carries his half and his pole with him on his blanket roll attached to his saddle, so as soon as he unsaddles he can select his "bunkie" and put up his tent. The officers' tents are wall tents, carried in the wagons and cannot be put up till the wagons come in.

As soon as that takes place details of men put up the officers' tents, get wood and water for the cooks, and the latter build their fire and at once set about getting supper. Soldiers like to have their food well cooked; but, better still, they appear to like it promptly cooked, and that camp cook is always popular who yells "Come and get it!" just a little sooner than it is expected.

On the march we eat but two meals a day. After breakfast the cooks give each man a liberal sandwich of bacon and bread. This the man incloses in his meat can and when he gets hungry eats it. This constitutes his mid-day meal.

Supper over, a guard is posted to look out for the safety of the camp, and the other men usually collect fuel, build a rousing fire, gather round it and amuse themselves by singing, telling yarns and cracking jokes upon each other till bedtime, which comes pretty early with men on the march. The officers fill in the time in about the same manner.

On the march one always has to rise early. There are so many things to be done in order to get the cavalcade fairly on the road that early rising is essential. The guard rouses the cooks long before daylight, and by the time the horses are fed and brushed off the cook announces breakfast. After breakfast the tents are taken down, wagons packed, the horses saddled, and the column is once more on the march.

Both Ways It's Good

WHEN you pick up the beautiful big December number of THE DELINEATOR you may like to exercise a woman's prerogative of turning to the last page "just to see how it comes out."

If you do, you will find there a most artistic appeal to every sweet tooth in America.

Then if you turn backward past the quaint little Eskimo eating his Christmas-tree candles,—past Aunt Betty's cheery letter,—past Sir Launcelot's Christmas fun for boys,—past Donakin's wonderful adventures with his "Wild-West" book,—past Mammy Possum, and the Jenny Wren Club, you will run into the last end of Eugene Wood's magnetically human fact story, "Attending to His Drop." Among all the interesting, amusing, and necessary things that fill each month's Delineator there is always something that insists on being read first. This is one of them.

If you start at the front end, after you have enjoyed the lovely painting by Gardner Soper, run through the pages where the last word in fashions is illustrated so charmingly in color. Pause for a moment at page 494; don't overlook its message. Read how a great group of readers can be of help to the editors, and how simple it is for the same readers to be of service to others. Now look at the story of the Pope's gentle life,—at the charming tale by the author of "Wee MacGregor,"—guess "What a Home with Forty Daughters" is about, and fall haphazard on the new Kipling story—there again you are treed, and it may be hours, perhaps days, before you will ever strike the heart of the magazine with its four full-page wonder-paintings of NEW YORK, that took nearly a year in the making, and that would look so cheerful on the nursery walls.

Tackle it from either end, front or back, it makes little difference; it's a fine, big, inspiring, sumptuous number of THE DELINEATOR, and you need it.
