As Result the United Business Men's Association is Making Effort to End Turmoil.

DIVERGENT CLAIMS AS TO STRENGTH OF MOVEMENT

Labor Leaders Insist, However, That 122,000 Men Are Out, While Police Put Number at 20,000.

Philadelphia, March 8.—All Philadelphia hopes that the city-wide movement, begun yesterday by the United Business Men's Association, to bring to a quick end the great labor conflict that has kept the "City of Brotherly Love" in turmoil the past two weeks, will be successful.

There were no important developments in the strike situation this afternoon. No violence was reported, only a normal number of policemen are patrolling the streets.

Although three days have passed since the general strike order became effective, it is yet impossible to accurately estimate the strength of the movement. Divergent claims continue from both sides.

While many mills and other industrial establishments are badly crippled, or closed down because of the trolley strike, the Rapid Transit company is meeting with increased success in operating its cars.

Striker is Condemned. The master builders met late yesterday and adopted resolutions condemning the sympathetic strike and discussed tentatively action against some of the bodies of men who joined the general strike movement.

Revolutions calling upon every man, woman and child in Philadelphia to quit their work were adopted with cheers. As the crowds were leaving the hall there was a grave outbreak of disorder.

Several cars were stoned on Sixth street in front of the strikers' meeting place. The police, of whom there were at least fifty within the radius of a square, charged the crowd which was, however, so dense that it dispersed slowly.

The board of directors of the United Business Men's Association appointed a committee of seven to call a convention of the business, commercial and trade bodies, business associations and religious and fraternal organizations to take all just and honorable means to effect a settlement of the street car strike.

Nicaragua Insurrection Is Ended; Provisional Generals in Flight

Confirmation of Chamorro's Crushing Defeat—Desertions Hourly Thinning Insurgent Ranks.

SOURCE OF MADRIZ' HELP THE MYSTERY OF THE DAY

Where Did He Get Money Enough to Put His Army at a High Point of Efficiency.

San Juan Del Sur, Nicaragua, March 8.—Telegrams received from Bluefields confirm the reports of General Chamorro's crushing defeat at Tisapa and Tiptapa on February 22.

The provisional government now makes no secret of the fact that its cause is lost. Except for the desperate hope that the United States may yet interfere, General Estrada and his lieutenants have nothing now to sustain them.

Washington, March 8.—What officials of the state department and Central American diplomats would particularly like to know at this stage of the Nicaraguan trouble is where Dr. Madriz suddenly got the money to put his military organization at its high point of efficiency.

But the United States government made it clear that it frowned on any financial assistance Mexico might wish to give. Consequently Mexico made no advance at that time, despite the fact that Dr. Madriz was Mexico's choice for president of Nicaragua, and Mexican financiers had interest in seeing that he remained in power.

The financial problem seemed the chief bugaboo of Dr. Madriz's administration until the insurgents were almost at the gates of Managua. Then came a flood of funds. Officials and soldiers were well paid, money was advanced here and there and a sufficient supply of ammunition procured to continue the fight for weeks if necessary.

It is certain that Dr. Madriz did not get any money from Salvador or Guatemala, because these are unfriendly nations and have made a point of keeping out of the fray. Dr. Madriz might have relied on Costa Rica or Honduras for money if either of these nations had had it.

Dr. Madriz must have borrowed a large sum to have equipped his army as he did. General Lara, who came from Honduras with five hundred men and helped the forces of Dr. Madriz, must have been well supplied to equip his expedition. Money flowed in freely from some source. The question is, From what source did it come?

Prisoners Liberated. Managua, Nicaragua, March 8.—President Madriz today liberated several political prisoners. All insurgent prisoners will be released soon. This move on the part of the government is expected to conciliate the Granada conservatives.
