A NIGHT OF DISORDER AT JOHN JONES' PLACE

The Inmates Are Rounded up in Police Court, and Practically Put Out of Business.

Judge Cooke in city police court this morning did the usual and decent element of the colored race in the east end section of the city a good time when he practically put out of business a joint in that section conducted by one John Jones which has for several weeks been a menace to the morals of the colored people, and against which no little complaint has come. The disorder among the men and women who frequent the place came to a climax last night when Jones, the proprietor and one Joe Ward, also of color, became involved in a difficulty. The row that ensued around the respectable negroes of that section and one negro, living near to Jones' place, with his wife very ill and fearing that the entire section might be burned or everybody of respectability murdered, made his way to police headquarters and as a result more than a dozen negroes of the low order were landed behind the bars charged with aiding and abetting in the conduct of a disorderly house.

HILL CLIMBING.

Food That Makes it a Pleasure.

"I have a large amount of laborious brain-fatiguing work to do," writes a young lady from Richmond, Va. After returning from the office, I have found myself so completely exhausted that I was unable to engage in any recreation or amusement. "I tried several expensive tonics without effect, and finally noticing an advertisement of Grape-Nuts as a food recommended to brain workers, I purchased a package and tried it. "I found it extremely palatable, and after a week's use (two meals of it a day), I noticed a general improvement in my condition. The feeling of extreme exhaustion was growing less, and strength visibly increased. "I began to put on flesh and felt ready to enter into the amusements of the other members of the family and now after using this food for eleven months I am like a new person. I do not have the sensation of fatigue; my brain is clear; eyes bright; skin rosy and healthy and my muscles have strengthened to a marked degree. "I am now able to walk from the office home, a distance of 3 1/2 miles up one of the steepest hills for which our city is famous, and to engage in any amusements that may come in my way. "I am also using Postum with excellent results. My sister-in-law, who lives in Norwalk, Conn., writes me that she uses it also, and has not suffered from the distressing sick headaches she formerly had. "Read 'The Road to Wellville,' found in place. 'There's a reason.' "Esse read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They're genuine, true, and full of human interest.

acted a place not far from Valley street where both men and women roomed. When disorder broke out, swarms of night prowlers and thieves and quiet mosquitoes and other immoralities was the chief order of the day or night. It was also in evidence that Jones and the negro Joe Ward got into a scrape that a bottle was used, that Ward picked up a lamp and rained it about his head and endangered not only the house in which he was but those houses nearby, that women were in rooms with men and that in short a very low order of civilization—if the word in fact might be employed—existed. It was a disgusting recital of brute-like life that was presented to the court and the court was quick to take cognizance of the fact that a house-keeping was in order. Jones was fined $25 and costs for conducting the place and a warning will be given that he must abate the nuisance. All the other parties and abettors were fined $5 and costs and warned to desist. In addition to a fine of $5 and costs for aiding and abetting Joe Ward, who appeared to be the principal in the affair, was given a fine of $5 and costs for being drunk and disorderly and a road sentence of 20 days for assault.

COL. S. A. JONES TO SPEAK HERE SATURDAY EVENING

Especially to Confederate Veterans and Their Wives—Thinks It Would Comfort Col. Lusk to Hear Him.

Editor of The Gazette-News: Kindly allow me space in your good paper, not to reply to Col. V. K. Lusk's letter to Hon. C. A. Reynolds, postmaster at Winston-Salem, of date of the 20th, asking for light on how he shall explain the nomination of the judicial candidates on the republican ticket of this state, and for light, or an interpretation of the local self-government plank in the republican platform. From a democratic standpoint, and from a true republican standpoint, there is no answer that could be given him that intelligence would indicate would change his lucid conclusion. If there is a time, or a place outside the sacred house of God that I feel not only like removing my hat but removing my shoes, it is when I stand before a group of the few left of those grand, brave old Confederate veterans, for I feel I am then on sacred ground. For no braver, more honorable and patriotic set of men ever went to battle than they. And no more sacred and just cause was blood ever shed for, except by the Great Master that gave His life for a sinful world, than was shed by the Confederate soldiers for this southernland. His sense of honor, his sense of integrity, and the value of his pledged word was more precious than his life. And I am advised that Col. Lusk was a Confederate soldier and a brave one. And no wonder he smarts under what he believes to be the false post-poned on him by the partisans that he fought and surrendered to, and then adopted the cause of the victors of the war between the states. I have watched his course, read much of his writing, and my faithful southern democratic heart has gone out to him many times in sympathy for the errors and the change that came to his life and my sympathy goes out to him now, his obdurate rigid southern civility and sentiments of honor, it is hard to crucify, a brave man's principle and conscience is hard to silence. He has called the cause for which he fought in the days of that cruel war, the lost cause. Never, no never, was or has that cause been, or will it ever be lost. If he, with all the other Confederate soldiers that have been punished for 50 years almost, like he was punished at the Gettysburg convention, will come out and hear me in my humble efforts to try to tell them why the Confederate cause was not lost, when I speak in Asheville on Saturday night, this week, the 21st, I believe that they will feel comforted for I love every man that honestly wore the gray, and I want them to bring their good wives. I have a message for them, the bravest, the noblest, and the purest women that God ever made, none purer than the mothers the daughters and the sisters and the wives of the brave men that wore the gray. I seldom tell jokes or stories when I speak on things as serious as the measures that now confront the American people, but Saturday night I will tell the story of Massey, Jesus is coming in the form of Marion Butler, for the benefit of the old Confederate veterans that have abandoned their faith and joined the republican party. Col. Lusk is bound to endorse Butlerism, the carpet-bag bond debt, the re-establishing of the negro franchise, and the federal bacon in our national elections, and the tariff that Mr. Taft says is the best that was ever written in law, and endorse the opening of the whiskey shop again in North Carolina if he remains out of the old Confederate record camp of political honor, and votes the republican ticket, local or national, this year.

The cause for which the south fought is not lost, it lives today; it is like the aromatic plant, the more you crush it and tread it down the more sure it will rise and diffuse its sweet-scented round. The appeal is going up today from Maine to California, from Alaska to Florida, to return to the constitution of our forefathers, which was written by, and at the birth of democracy, fought for and won by democracy, and re-washed and purified in the precious blood of the south, and the only change was that the canker sore of slavery was cut from the body politic, and the state right, or local government, idea that a local community might rule in spots, that would inoculate the deadly disease of the whole body, was settled and settled forever by the blood of both the gray and the blue, and when the righteous heritage of the supremacy of the white race shall rise up and repeal the fifteenth amendment, fastened on this nation by egotism, bigotry and hatred, the grand old document of the American constitution will again be the glory of the nation and the hope of the white men of the world.

at divine service now spend all their time with in or under their machines. The Texas bankers, after gathering statistics, declare that the value of all the automobiles in the state—$45,000,000—is more than half the combined capital of all the banks in the state. The annual depreciation of Texas automobiles they reckon at $15,000,000, which is four times the annual fire losses of the state. What's to be done? Perhaps the churches and the banks, seeing that they both complain of the same thing, might combine to remedy the situation. Certainly ecclesiastical denunciation, if it were backed up by the financial thunders, would have much more effect than it usually does.

Super-Medical Advice. Bilkins—Doctor, my wife has lost her voice. What can I do about it? Doctor—Well, as a married man, I'd advise you to get down on your knees and return thanks—Chicago News.

Starting It Too High. It was in the days before church organs and choirs and Deacon Dorsey volunteered to lead the singing of an old hymn, says Success. He started out very well: "My soul, be on thy guard—ten thou"—and he stopped over again, "My soul, be on thy guard—ten thou" and once more he stopped, this time pitched so low that he could not proceed. "Say, Brother Dorsey," said one of the congregation, "hadn't you better start it five thousand?"
