IN MAINE.

Since the Governor and his council will have to determine the result of the prohibition election in Maine, the unofficial figures leaving the exact result in doubt, one is apt to get the impression that popular opinion in that state is equally divided on the wisdom of selling spirituous and malt liquors.

Looking at the matter in this way, the moral of the recent election, or the immoral significance of that event, is plain.

However this very close election may ultimately be determined by the higher officers of the state, it is apparent that a majority of the voters of Maine, less the blind tigers (if as alleged the prefer the status quo), after trying state-wide prohibition for a period covering a great many years, are now in favor of giving the liquor traffic the sanction of the State.

We judge from Senator Bailey's remarks that this time he will not reconsider, unless the senatorial salary is boosted mightily in the next year or so.

There is considerable difference of opinion on the subject in Maine.

A man named E. P. O'Kelly from the Upper Honyon section, is in town today trying to locate some money, which he claims the county owes him for serving as a witness in Superior court during one of the terms of 1907.

The latter states that he received his witness ticket but did not get his money, as he left almost immediately to join the army.

covered with such inscriptions as "Vote No" and "A no vote is a vote for us." "Which do you want, beer or boys?"

The prohibitionists in this city are considerably encouraged by the tremendous reception given to Congressman Hobson. The Jefferson theater, where the rally was advertised, was soon filled to overflowing and an adjacent Baptist church was utilized for an overflow meeting.

THE HENDERSONVILLE CASE.

The coroner and his jury at Hendersonville knew how the young girl, Myrtle Hawkins, came by her death, but officially they said they did not know, with the result that the press of a number of cities have made a profound and sensational mystery out of the case where none existed.

In rendering their official verdict in conflict with their official, if preliminary, acquired information, the coroner and jury were influenced by the hope that the persons who committed the crime would be thrown off their guard, that there would be imparted to them a feeling of fancied security.

It is most gratifying to the medical fraternity in Hendersonville and their professional brethren to learn, from the statement of Coroner Kirk, that no suspicion attaches to any Hendersonville physician in connection with the Hawkins case.

Perhaps we may be permitted, without disclosing too much of the unregenerate side of our nature, to lament the fact that we are not to have a good circus in connection with our fair.

President Taft had as well keep out of the enemy's country, since he can hardly convince those western people against their will.

We judge from Senator Bailey's remarks that this time he will not reconsider, unless the senatorial salary is boosted mightily in the next year or so.

There is considerable difference of opinion on the subject in Maine.
