Great Honor for Ollie James.

New York Evening Post... Representative Ollie M. James, of Kentucky, has a tremendously large head, with practically no hair on it, and is a famous sight.

One of James' most intimate friends is Representative Thomas Hefflin, of Alabama, another 6-footer of large frame, who boasts of one of the heaviest crops of hair of any member of congress. Both are great practical jokers. A few days ago Hefflin approached James and told him that he had just learned that a postoffice in Arkansas had been named after the Kentucky congressman.

"Is that so?" replied James. "Well, well, I am certainly getting famous. Not long ago a friend of mine named a race horse after me, calling it 'Congressman James.' By the way, Hefflin, what did they call this town in Arkansas?"

"Fald Knob," replied Mr. Hefflin.
