This the 14th day of October, 1911. C. N. MALONE, Trustee.

The Solicitor

By CELIA ATKINSON
Copyright by American Press-Association, 1911.

John Gardner was down on his luck. He had been well born and well educated. Then one misfortune after another came upon him and the family to which he belonged just as he was ready to make a start in life and threw him, so to speak, on his beam ends. He went about applying for a position, but since he had had no experience in any department of business he received no better offer than to solicit orders for a patent gas burner.

Gardner, who had not yet worn out his good clothes and was afraid of meeting some of his old friends who would know what he was doing, kept his samples down in the bottom of his pocket. He had sufficient pluck, however, to drag himself from one house to another, and whenever he was received by any one whom he was sure he had never seen before would produce a gas burner and proceed to expatiate on what a wonderful light it would make and how little gas would be burned.

One morning he rang the bell of a residence, and the door was opened by a young girl. He didn't mind soliciting of old women, old men or servants, but girls troubled him. He was about to ask if there one he was trying to find lived there, but changed his mind, concluding that as short a way as any to make an excuse to go on would be to produce a sample. The girl would say she had no use for it and that would end the matter.

"I am canvassing for a patent gas burner," he began, when the girl, much to his surprise, said, "Step inside." He did so, and she led the way to a drawing room. Then, asking him to be seated, she waited for him to proceed with his narrative. "There was nothing left for him but to do so.

"This gas burner," he said, "is arranged to separate the gas into minute streams, so that it will mingle freely with the oxygen of the air, producing a brilliant light and consuming a minimum of gas. Instead of the enormous gas bills run up by using the ordinary form of burner, the consumer finds himself or herself indebted to the company for a bagatelle."

"Are you quite sure," interrupted the girl, "that the company will not at the end of the month be indebted to the consumer?" Gardner looked at her with a constrained smile, but seeing no sign of pleasure and scarcely knowing what he was saying, staggered on.

"We scarcely claim that for it, but we are willing to guarantee that the monthly gas bills will be reduced by 50 per cent of what they are when the ordinary burner is used."

"At what price do you sell your burners?" "At 10 cents each."

"I will take a hundred of them, I suppose you will put them on for me." "Large orders like that are usually put on by some one from the factory."

"I am opposed to allowing Tom, Dick and Harry the freedom of the house. I shall expect you to put them on yourself."

"Certainly, if you wish it. Will to-morrow at this hour be convenient for you?" "Yes."

Gardner bowed himself out, astonished. The most that was required of him was to introduce the burner. It was not expected that he would make sales of more than a few burners at a time. But here were a hundred ordered at 10 cents apiece. That would be $10, of which his commission would be 60 per cent, or $6. He was quite elated.

The next day he called with the burners and was received by the young lady, who informed him that her mother was indisposed and it was necessary that the house should be kept quiet. The burners, therefore, could not be put on that day, but if he would call the next afternoon at 3 o'clock the work might be done. She intimated that no haste was necessary either in the burners being put on or his proceeding with his soliciting. She asked him into the library, where she introduced the subject of books, upon which she discoursed with as much volubility as he had used in demonstrating burners. When he departed he was a good deal puzzled.

But he was more so when the next afternoon he called to put on the burners. A phanton was standing at the door, and when he went inside the young lady, attired for going out, was putting on her gloves.

"I think," she said, "that I'll not have the burners put on this afternoon. To tell the truth, I am a stockholder in a gas company, and your burners consume so little gas that I fear a complication."

"What complication?" asked Gardner, opening his eyes.

"Why, I am afraid that as a stockholder I shall become indebted to myself as a consumer."

The two stood looking at each other for a few moments, when a smile broke over the girl's face.

"I knew you," she said, "from the moment you rang the doorbell the other day. You are John Gardner, and I met you not very long ago at Mrs. Tucker's. I have heard of your misfortunes and admire your pluck in taking hold of the world even if your first grip is nothing better than a gas burner. I'm going to ride and shall be happy to have you go with me."

Six months later Gardner married the girl and a fortune.

Illness is due to a disordered condition of the stomach. Chamberlain's Tablets are essentially a stomach medicine, intended especially to act on that organ to cleanse it, tone and invigorate it, to regulate the liver and to build biliousness, constipation and acidity. For sale by all druggists.

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W, Notre Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

Fairy Tales. Ted Robinson, in Cleveland Plain Dealer. You never hear good stories now. The dear, old-fashioned kind; These modern tales don't seem, somehow, To satisfy the mind.

I wish some one would tell a few Like those we loved of old; The ones we used to think were true—The stories mother told! When I was just a little chap, As soon as it was night I'd climb up into mother's lap And she would hold me tight.

All tell of fairies, giants, and of warriors brave and bold—And ne'er have tales seemed half so grand As those that mother told! Tale after tale she'd tell—and then, When she would say she'd done, I'd always make her start again And tell another one.

Until, at last, all tired out, My eyes would close their hold On wakefulness—I'd dream about The tales that mother told. Then, by and by, there'd come a knock And she'd lead father in, And, as she pointed at the clock, He'd grin a sickly grin; His business kept him late, he swore, Ways he'd explain and scold Till mother's tales looked pale before The stories father told!

You are not experimenting on yourself when you take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a cold as that preparation has won its great reputation an extensive sale by its remarkable cures of colds, and can always be depended upon. It is equally valuable for adults and children and may be given to young children with implicit confidence as it contains no harmful drug. Sold by all dealers.

NOTICE. By authority of the power of sale given to the undersigned in a certain deed of trust executed by P. C. Hubert and his wife on February 25, 1908, which said deed of trust is duly recorded in Book of Mortgages No. 75 at page 120 in the office of the Register of Deeds for Buncombe county, N. C., default having been made in the payment of the debt secured thereby when the same became due, said debt being still unpaid, and the holder thereof having requested the undersigned to exercise said power of sale, I, Haywood Parker, trustee, will on Monday, November 6th, 1911, at 12 o'clock, noon, in front of the Court House door in Asheville, N. C., sell by public auction to the highest bidder for cash the following described land—situate, lying and being in the city of Asheville, North Carolina, being bounded and more particularly described as follows:

Beginning at a stake in the West margin of East street, the northeast corner of A. F. Cook's lot, and runs thence with said East street 4 deg East forty-nine (49) feet to a stake; thence North 81 1/2 deg. West eighty-nine (89) feet to a stake; thence with the line of lot No. 2, five deg. West thirty-one (31) feet to a stake, the northwest corner of A. F. Cook's lot; thence with the Northern boundary line of said lot South 71 deg. 50 min. East ninety-four and one-half (94 1/2) feet to the beginning; it being the same lot conveyed to Hesta Evans by Z. W. Israel and wife by deed registered in the office of Register of Deeds for Buncombe county in Book 143 at page 354 and dated June 28th, 1906. This October 6th, 1911.
