HISTORY OF THEIR JOYS UNFOLDED TO THE COURT

Warrant for an Arrest for Retailing—One Curfew Law Violator.

M. D. Andrews was before Judge Adams in police court this morning on the charge of being drunk in a public place in the city. He plead guilty to the charge and, when the facts in the case were given by the policeman who made the arrest, it might have been considered that the case was over, since the defendant stated that he had not been up before for 15 years, but the court developed a sudden and insatiable desire to know where the whiskey came from. The defendant stated that he had not bought it but that it had been given to him. That seemed to put an end to the case again, but the court wanted to know where the man got it who had given it to him. There was considerable hesitation on the part of Andrews about telling this but after mature deliberation he finally stated that he was with a man named John Brown from Barnardsville and the latter had made the purchase from "Buddie" Earwood. A warrant was therefore ordered to be sworn out for Earwood and the case will probably be heard Monday morning. It is learned that Brown will not likely be in town before that date.

Mack Brown, colored, was another defendant who was before the court for being drunk and from his evidence it would seem that some evil spirit had been bent upon getting Adams drunk. He said that yesterday afternoon he answered a call for ice water in a room at the hotel where he works and that when he carried up the pitcher containing the thirst-quenching fluid, the occupant of the room insisted on giving him a drink for his trouble. He hated to refuse of course and took it. When he got down stairs there was another call for ice water and he answered that. There he found a large drink already poured and the owner told him to drink it and wash out the glass. Again he hated to be unsociable and the evil genius behind the whole affair prevailed and he swallowed the cursed stuff. That last drink had been a coffee, tea, and the defendant said that he began retching drunk as soon as he got down stairs. There were possibly other calls for ice water but he didn't recall them. It is possible that he did not remember them for his memory played him a scurvy trick about the two pints of firewater which he had when he was arrested, and he was totally unable to remember where he got it.

Both the defendants were let off with the costs, for the stories of both showed exonerating circumstances and besides the court may have wished to give them something to be thankful for on this lovely Thanksgiving morning. This spirit also extended to Craig Styles, who was the only other defendant before the court. Craig is about 18 years old and can't remember the times that he has been in police court. He was up this morning for the very heinous crime of being out last night after 9 o'clock and thus violating the curfew law. Of course there was nothing for the court to do but turn him loose, but Judge Adams did not wish him to think he was getting off that way. Instead he thought over the matter very carefully for several minutes and then told Styles that he had decided to give him one more chance, so he might go if he would be real good.

DAY'S HAPPENINGS IN THE PIEDMONT

is located a gas range. It is a fact that when the family retired Tuesday night the house was in order, including the kitchen. Yesterday morning the kitchen portion of the house was in disorder insofar as the gas range and the "possum" were concerned. The "possum" was found dead on the floor from asphyxiation; the room was filled with gas and all the cocks of the range turned on. Investigation revealed the fact that the "possum" had gnawed his way out of the wooden box and the only solution of the matter is that the animal after getting out of the box in some manner turned on the gas. When Mr. Kiser first attempted to enter the kitchen yesterday morning he was driven back by the gas and it was some little time after the windows and doors had been opened before it was safe to remain in the room.

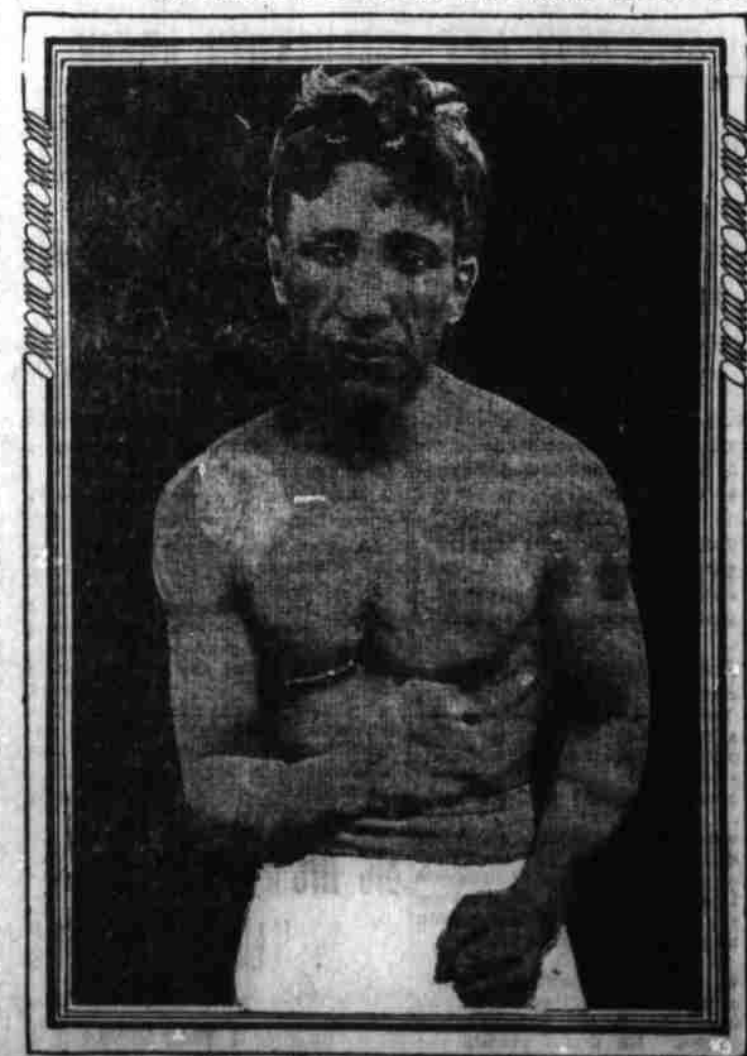

Thanksgiving Observance.

Thanksgiving day in Greensboro was observed today. Practically all business was suspended, the merchants of the city closing their establishments all day; the banks suspended business while in and around the federal building and the county court house an air of quietness prevailed. The churches of Greensboro held thanksgiving services and the attendance was large.

In the afternoon many football enthusiasts went to the game between the Greensboro High school and the All-Stars. Many other enthusiasts of the game stayed in town hanging around the newspaper offices and the telegraph companies' offices in an effort to hear something from the Virginia-Carolina game at Richmond or the A. and M. and V. P. I. game at Norfolk. A number of social functions were enjoyed during the afternoon and this evening including Thanksgiving dinners and dances.

The Orphans Remembered.

The Masons of Greensboro generously remembered the orphans at the Masonic orphanage at Oxford this year. Boxes containing about 100 articles were packed here by kind and loving hands and sent to the orphanage this week in time to reach the little ones for Thanksgiving. In addition to the articles contributed by the people of Greensboro, a check for a neat sum of money was sent along. The total value of the gifts was placed at $250. The Masonic committee which had the matter in charge was well pleased with the result of their efforts and profoundly grateful for the cordial co-operation of the people of Greensboro generally who responded nobly to the call in the interest of children's happiness.

Interesting Deed Recorded.

Probably one of the most interesting deeds ever recorded in North Carolina is on record in the register's office in the Guilford county court house. The deed was probated May 1, 1875, and conveys a piece of property located at what is now the corner of Eugene and West Washington streets. The consideration named in the deed of conveyance was love and affection, two hound pups, two pullets, a variety of fowl not stated, and $5. The deed was from Eugene Morehead and wife to Joseph M. Morehead. The piece of property that a little more than a quarter of a century ago went for the hound pups, rooster, pullets and "V." is now valued at several thousand dollars.
