To this end a non-partisan tariff board with full power to compel testimony and to report to congress was advocated.

A revision of the Sherman law was suggested in the following words: "For the cure of corporate and trust evils we favor legislation that shall effectively regulate and control in the public interests the great instrumentalities of modern business, such legislation clearly to define and provide against recognized wrongs such as the exploitation of humanity for profit, stock watering, organizing companies without substantial assets, agreements to control production, market prices and the like; our desire is to protect the honest and punish the dishonest business man."

Other planks of the platform declared for popular election of United States senators, a national income graduated upward and the abolition of needless public position.

Debate Over Endorsement.

The first difference of opinion arose when an added resolution to promise support to no candidate was recom-mended by the committee on resolutions. The committee of 18 members had entered their deliberations, most of them declared, heartily in favor of expressing themselves for Robert M. LaFoliette. Their opinions had been changed after they had heard ad-dresses by Pinchot and Fackler. The resolution was reported just after. Senator Works had made an address urging the delegates to follow the ex-ample of California and to centralize their compaigning for one man. "Colonel Roosevelt should declare himself," he said. "If he should de-clare himself I would not hesitate to support him and neither would La-Follette, Senator LaFollette has made the principles for which he stands an issue. California has endorsed him and felt that an attempt to evade it and felt that an attempt to evalue it would have been cowardly." The committee report came at the end of Senator Works' speech and was followed immediately by Pinchot, who defended the resolution. "If we declare for a single candi-date," he warned, "we run the risk of going to Chicago to find progressive delerates from different communities delegates from different communities morally bound to support half a dozen different candidates."
