THE MYSTERY OF JOHN BOUNCE

A Genius Who Was Inventive In Several Ways.

Johnny Bounce and I were school-mates and fast friends. Johnny was younger than I, but stronger. Every boy who could lick me availed himself of the opportunity just for the fun of it.

"You don't know me, Tom?" "No, I don't." "I'm Johnny Bounce." My heart sank, for I knew that the world had been too much for John.

Strong, Vigorous Feet, Never Sore

Just Rub on EZO for the Feet and away goes Foot Misery

Just think of it; only 25 cents for a generous jar of EZO, a pleasant, refined ointment that quickly soaks into the pores and in a few minutes brings blessed relief to tired, weary, sore, burning, tender feet.

It's so easy to use, too—no fuss or bother getting ready—no time wasted—just rub on EZO for the feet and misery vanishes. Used daily it makes weak feet strong and vigorous and draws the agony from Corns, Bunions and Callouses.

Ask for EZO FOR THE FEET.

John, referring to one of his schemes, "without being grubstaked. I haven't any capital to put in, but I wish you would let me lend you what you need from time to time. I've got $10 here in my— No? Don't need it? Well, whenever you do come right in here and get it."

I knew perfectly well that he needed money, but could not bring himself to take it from me, whose equal he had been in everything except an ability to punch boys' heads, and in this he had been my superior.

One morning a woman came into my office and said she had heard John Bounce, who boarded with her, speak of me. She said that Bounce owed her $57.45 for board, and she would like me to tell her if he had any property on which she could levy.

John never came to see me. His pride, his sensitiveness, whatever it was, wouldn't let him. One day a long while after the board bill episode I received a note from an undertaker telling me that a man named John Bounce had died in a boarding house.

I was sorry now since poor John was gone that I had not been able to do more for him. I inclosed a check for the amount and authorized a call for more. I did the latter as an excuse to my conscience for not attending to the matter personally.

A few months later I received a note from one who wrote that he had been an intimate friend of the late Mr. John Bounce, the inventor. It was proposed by several of Mr. Bounce's friends to place a headstone at his grave.

This wonder turned out to be a reality. I accepted the offer, and when the check was paid me my eyes filled with tears.

We wish to call your attention to the and a stronger emphasis of the need of such whooping cough, diphtheria and scarlet fever are contracted when the child has a cold.

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

How a Popular Young Matron Makes Her Guests "at Home."

THE PROPHET'S CHAMBER.

"Little Women" a Complete Success to Admirers of Miss Alcott's Book—All the Favorite Characters Live Again. Professor Proposes in Plumfield Orchard.

Dear Elsa—Dick and I have just come back from a delightful week end visit to a particularly charming young matron of our acquaintance who seems to have discovered the secrets of true hospitality, that virtue so rare in this bustling life of today.

I am going to tell the story of hospitality as it was told to me. "When we were first married," said this young matron, "we didn't have a spare room at all. If people came to visit us we had to turn out of our room and camp on couches during the visit.

"Do you remember the story of the woman who kept a room ready for a prophet so that he might come and go as he pleased without troubling any one? Her hospitality brought her good luck in time of trouble, and I think it would be rather nice if we had a prophet's chamber, too, a little room always ready for our friends."

"If our unique spare room has not brought us luck it has certainly enabled us to make a number of grateful and warm friends who can be trusted to stand by us in time of trouble.

"One side of the chest belongs to men visitors and the other to women. "On the men's side I keep the following things: "A pair of pajamas. "A pair of loose slippers which will be comfortable to tired feet.

"A nightgown. "A thin woolen vest for those who like something warm under the gown.

"A dressing jacket and a dressing gown, a pair of bedroom slippers in the shape of 'mules.' These fit any one, because only the toes are slipped into them.

"A well stocked pin cushion. "A little pot of toilet cream. "A bottle of eau de cologne. "Waving pins and hairpins.

"The guests who visit us often have toothbrushes labeled with their names, but for the chance guest I always keep a supply of new brushes. "Now, isn't this a splendid idea? I have begun to get things together already for a prophet's room.

A very clever woman has dramatized "Little Women," and the play is having a great run here in New York. Miss Aldrich has made Jo and Meg, Amy and Beth, to say nothing of Laurie and the professor, Marmee and Aunt March such real characters to all of her readers that I, who was brought up on the book, was afraid the play would be disappointing. Quite the reverse was the case. It is charming, and even Jo's boots—the famous given her by a friend who knew a lady who knew an actor—these actual boots were loaned by John Alcott, a nephew of the author, who was one of Meg's twins.

The curtain rises on such a homy scene. Everything is right, from the geraniums blooming on the window sill to the old fashioned pictures and chairs, and, yes, there was Beth's doll cradle, looking as if it had been up in somebody's attic for fifty years, too precious to throw away, too "queer" for the children of today, who must have brass beds for their dolls.

There is Jo, of course. Where else could she be but lying on the floor in front of the fire, eating an apple, with her wonderful hair bunched into a net? "Christmas won't be Christmas without any presents"—the very words of the book. And a lump rose in my throat as I remembered the Christmas I found "Little Women" in my stocking, put there by father.

Then there was Laurie, not quite so handsome, I must acknowledge, as the hero of my dreams, but quite irresistible when you got to know him. He teased the girls and loved Marmee and paid special attention to Jo, and, oh, dear, if he didn't propose to her again! That dreadful scene! If Louisa Alcott knew how many girls have wept and wept over that chapter! When Beth dies there is not a dry eye in the house. And then come Jo and her professor. Those of us who can forgive Jo for deserting her "boy" in the book have to fight all over again, for the professor is fat and has not a sense of humor like Laurie. The professor's proposal in the play takes place in the orchard at Plumfield, for it would be impossible to have a rainstorm on the stage. But it's all just wonderful, and you must come to town to see it and yours devotedly. MABEL.
