A MODERN HERO IN WAR. He Meets the Demands of Duty and Greatly Honored. The general beckoned to the aid. "Have you found the man who led the forlorn hope, the first man to scale the enemy's earthwork?" "He is here, general." The man came forward. The general unpinned the medal from the breast of his coat and held it out to the hero. "Take this, my brave fellow," he said, and his voice shook with emotion as he extended his arm.

There was a sudden click. "Thank you," said the stranger. That ought to be first class. Easy. natural, dignified. Thank you again." The general stared.

"How is this?" he demanded. "Just as I am about to hand to you the jeweled emblem of surpassing bravery you draw a camera on me. Are yo not a soldier?"

"Me a soldier! No. no. I'm not brave enough for a soldier.' "But you led the forlorn hope?"

"Because it was my duty." "I don't understand." "I had to do it or get scooped."

"Then what are you?" "I'm a staff photographer, general!" And just then the headquarters band began playing "See, the Conquering Hero Comes," and the photographer cloth. Apply lemon juice or a ripe toran out and photographed the band.-Cleveland Plain Dealer.

 HOW TO LOOK PRETTY EVEN THOUGH SEASICK.

Many women wear the smart steamer coat and hat only at the beginning and end of a voyage, loafing about the deck between times in the comfortable knitted sweaters and caps which are just now the fad. These knitted caps are ideal for ocean wear. as they keep the hair from blowing untidily about and, unlike the chiffon veil, do not themselves whisk about in the breezes,

The quaint bonnet cap matches the white sweater with blue border trimmings, the cap being of white worsted with a border of blue and blue ribbon rosettes and ties. There is a bubyish suggestion about such a knitted bonnet with its big ear rosettes that is charming on just the right type of face, and, of course, the girl with the big blue eyes is ravishing in a blue ribboned baby cap.

One sees these cans in lovely soft shades of tan and brown. matching knitted sweaters to the same colors, and one pretty, fair haired girl, crossing recently, wore a well fitting knitted coat of sage green worsted with a bonnet in the same shade, tied with deeper green ribbons ••••••••••••••••

NOVEL JABOTS.

How to Make Smart and Becoming Neckwear.

A pretty embroidered linen jabot can be made from a handkerchief. You will have little difficulty making the labot if these directions are close ly followed: Place the handkerchief flat on the table and turn one point under to form a straight top for the labot. Now, using the point opposite as a center, fold the sides into plaits until the jabot is the desired width. Baste the plaits in place and pres with a heated iron. When the bast ngs are removed you will have a jabot pretty enough to please any one. The embroidered handkerchiefs with edges of handmade lace are especially lovely when used for jabots.

Four handkerchiefs can be joined to form a dainty tea apron. When these are sewed together by hand they form a large square. Arrange this with one point forming a bib and run a gather ing string across the front, so that the apron fits properly at the waist line. Stitch a band of lace insertion over this and run ribbon through to form the apron strings.

The apron is finished by a narrow edging of valenciennes lace. Attractive bureau searfs and a table cover for the bedroom can be made by using the handkerchiefs as medallions and pointing them together. these with an edging of lace.
