See Helen Gardner's

Idealistic Interpretation of one of History's Most Famous Women.

The Egyptian Princess Whe Swayed the Destinies of the World Through Her Mastery of its Makers.

HISTORY chronicles no more remarkable figure than Cleopatra VI, Princess of Egypt, a wonderful beautiful woman whose intellect made her almost a match for Caesar, the greatest Roman emperor.

Cleopatra for whose love men fought and died; whose love for Marc Antony, the great Roman general, has been the inspiration of artists, poets, writers and playwrights for centuries.

Miss Gardner's potrayal of the Egyptian princess is a masterly interpretation. The actor submerges her own individuality in that of Cleopatra's and becomes for the time being the princess herself in her varied moods of tigerish ferocity, seductive languor, cunning and haughtiness,

The intensity of the impersonation is so great that you forget the fact that it is but a motion picture that you see and are carried back through the years to the time when Cleopatra played at diplomacy and love with the world makers, and held the destinies

Adapted From Victorien Sardou's Wonderful Drama

Yet even with so authoritative a guide as the noted French writer's drama, the production of this film was an undertaking of magnitude. With so great an actress as Miss Gardner in the leading role, the selection of capable support was extremely difficult. The study and thought necessary before costumes and scenery could be designed can be appreciated only by those who have seen Sardou's drama.

No detail was too small to receive attention. Supported by the enthusiasm of the actors, who rehearsed with tireless energy, the producers have created for you a photoplay that is soul stirring in its dramatic qualities and instructive in its historical side. Few plays by the best actors could leave a deeper impression on your memory than will the picture play of Cleopatra. 3 4 16 41

A 5-Act Motion Picture More Than One Mile Long

It holds the attention from the start and, accompanied by special music, affords an evening's entertainment never equaled anywhere at any price. It is the fifth act of this great motion play that pleases best. Here Miss Gardner's acting stamps her as one of the greatest motion-picture players of the world.

In this scene with enthralling fidelity and matchless grace of movement, she depicts Cleopatra, now a queen, in her loyal love for the wayward Marc Aniony She reaches the climax of emotional acting when, in her grief at her warrior lover's death, she seeks her own, and ends a life that kept the world and its masters in throes
