And McFarlin went to pieces in the ighth. That tells the story, when it s added that a large part of his support disintegrated with him, or a short time after him. The score was 9 to 7 in favor of Raleigh.

McFarlin had pitched ame for seven innings. He had been hit rather freely, but he had good apport and had always succeeded in ulling out without allowing any runs But in the eighth Mack led off with stinging single to center. The same and happened before, however, and the fans felt little uneasiness, since Asheville had a lead of four runs. Then McFarlin walked Nield. He thought Umpire Miller robbed him by called balls, and it seemed to affect him. In fact, he couldn't seem to get over it. Turner next up hit for two bags, and two scored. Then Edwards got a scratch hit; then Cruthers went safe on Rafferty's error. Then Mc-Farlin caved. He entreated his removal from the mound but he was kept there. Then he could not seem to pick up an easy bunt, and Waynack went in. He stayed long enough allow a sacrifice fly and to walk a an; then Watson went in with the ases full and one man out. Butts hit the ball over the fence for four runs. After giving up a scratch hit and walking a man, Watson fanned ne and retired another on a fly. Even after this Raleigh had som trouble. Whitaker had replaced Ed-monds in the seventh. He gave up two scratch hits and two doubles, al-lowing two runs; and with two men ut, Mehaffey was sent to the mound Asheville scored one more in the ninth and might have done more but Milliman, who forced out a man at sec ond, neglected to proceed to first, pos sibly thinking it was three out, and he was ptu out.
