

AMUSEMENTS
MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, Matinee and Night, "The Little Millionaire."
WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, "Little Boy Blue."
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, "Robin Hood."

"The Little Millionaire."
George M. Cohan's fame as a playwright, needs no boosting but when he wrote "The Little Millionaire" the musical farce, to be presented here with Bert Leigh and Hazelle Burgess at the Auditorium, matinee and night, on September 23, he again convinced his public and the critic as well, that when it came to feeling the pulse of the public as to their amusement wants, he could come as near satisfying it as any native or foreign author who has operated on the American stage in recent years.

"Robin Hood."
It is twenty years since "Robin Hood" was written by Reginald de Koven and Harry S. Smith, and since then, both composer and librettist have written innumerable other works, but "Robin Hood" stands pre-eminent in the affections of both the authors and the public.

most of the opera houses of the continent. The leading tenor is Isha Ferguson of the Imperial opera, St. Petersburg. Both these foreign singers speak perfect English.

Other singers in the large cast are Joseph Parsons, Jerome Daley, Sid Graham, Sara Mason, Helena Morrill, while the comedy is taken care of by George B. Frothingham, the last of the original Bostonians; and Phil Branson and Tillie Salinger.

LIKE THE TOWER OF BABEL
Thirty-two Languages Spoken in Barnum and Bailey Dressing Rooms.
No less than fifteen interpreters are required to keep the 400 performers of the Barnum and Bailey circus on a basis of communication. A trip down the little street of the show grounds, which is lined on either side with the tents of the performers, is like a visit to the Pike or the Midway Plaisance of World's Fair days.

It is an all-European show which the Barnum and Bailey management will bring to Asheville, Saturday, Sept. 27. Over 300 of the performers are making their first trip through America. From Germany come the Wirth family of equestrians, the Siegrist-Sibin family of aerialists and Hans Faust, trainer of the great bell-ringing stallions.
