Tuesday, Oct. 14.—"Mutt and Jeff in Panama."
Wednesday, Oct. 15.—Annie Russell & Co.

The New "Mutt and Jeff" is a Veritable Innovation!

With a sensational melodramatic story under the title of "Mutt and Jeff in Panama," Gus Hill's perennial success of that name, reappears "spick and span," everything new but the buttons, to clean up the coin again as it has done for the past two years. The irrepressible "Gus" has evidently kept tabs on every line, thrill, laugh, song and situation during his entire "nearly a century" of theatrical experience. There's a catchy music, whistleable music, a laugh to every breath, a song bit or an entrancing dance number, whenever your sides ache from excessive laughter, and a bunch of exceedingly pretty girls to give the whole thing zest. With gorgeous scenic and light effects and a magnificent change of costume for every one of the 20 or more song and dance numbers, "Mutt and Jeff," with the big $50,000 production, comes to the Auditorium on next Tuesday for a matinee and night performance. You wouldn't wish your worst enemy such luck as to miss "Mutt and Jeff." Get seats tomorrow at Allison's if you want a good seat. That's good advice. Night prices are 50, 75 cents and $1; matinee prices are 50 and 75 cents, children 25 cents for any seat.

Annie Russell's Comedy Company. This is the second season of Annie Russell's Comedy company as an organization, although its individual members have been recruited of the best ranks of high comedy. Each member has had long service in the best companies in both England and America, although all the players are English by birth and training. Miss Russell, who heads her company, has been a star in America for many seasons. The late Clement Scott, who served the Daily Telegraph with scholarly distinction for many years, referred to Miss Russell as "a genius," and called her talent "very rare and beautiful." Miss Russell's support is very able. Her leading man, Oswald Yorke, has appeared in the best companies of England and America for many seasons. F. Percival Stevens, before joining Miss Russell, had previously acted in support of the most notable English-speaking stars, including Sir Beebohm Tree. His Tony Lumpkin in "She Stoops to Conquer" has been regarded as a classic. Fred Perrain, who plays character parts in the Comedy company, has with

Sir John Hare, Sir Charles Wyndham, Forbes Robertson and other distinguished English stars. Miss Ffolliott Paget who plays leading women character parts with the late Joseph Jefferson for many seasons. Other members of Miss Russell's company who have had the best experience and training are: Littledale Power, Harold Meltzer, Murray Kinnell, Thomas Groeland, Henrietta Goodwin and others not quite so well known. "She Stoops to Conquer" will be the offering next Wednesday, October 15. Prices will range from 50 cents to $2. The seat sale will open Monday morning at Allison's.

Primrose and Dockstader's Minstrels. George Primrose, "the man with the velvet feet," and Lew Dockstader, "the fellow of infinite jest," are appearing together again this season as joint stars with their consolidated minstrel company. They are featuring old time negro minstrelsy, plus magnificent scenic embellishments, sumptuous costumes and with an all-star company of minstrel celebrities.

Aged Musician Charms With Rustic Instrument

In the building which houses the exhibits of old relics, at the Western North Carolina fair, is an old violin, or fiddle, that looks old enough to have been the first one ever made. It is purely a "home made" instrument as can be seen by the rough, unfinished edges and other parts that lack the touch of the master maker. The bow, which is very long is perhaps the most interesting part of it, for the strings are made from the hair taken from a horse owned by the man who made the old fiddle, and a remarkable fact is that the bow is apparently just as strong now as it was many years ago.

Last night several people were standing around the case admiring the old fiddle, when an old gentleman, a typical son of the mountains, came up and finally getting the eye of the attendant, asked if he might look at the instrument. It was taken from the case and he took it in his hands, handling it as gently and carefully as if it had been a little baby. He examined it thoroughly and then asked if he might "feel" of the strings a bit. "Yes," said the attendant, "but I am sure that I need not tell you to be very careful with it."

He assured her that he would not hurt it, and raising the old fiddle to his chin, he closed his eyes and gently pulled the aged bow across the string until he got to playing good; then he commenced to rock with the music. It was not long until at least 150 people were trying to get into the small room, for few people there had ever heard such music before. Wild and untamed as it was, liking the training of a teacher. One could see that the old man had the touch of a master player. He played the old tunes that were familiar to our grandparents; played them until it seemed the old man was living them over again.

In the crowd were three young New Yorkers. They had never heard anything like this before, and never once during the entire performance did they take their eyes from the player; and when he had finished, they were the first to rush forward and congratulate him.

While everyone was talking about how fine his playing was, the old man slipped away and could not be found. "He comes every day," says the attendant, "and always asks if he may play a little."
