MR. WILLARD'S DISTRESS SIGNAL

The statement of President Willard of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at the advance rate hearing in Washington Tuesday that his system is near a "crisis" because of a decrease in net earnings has attracted considerable attention as a summary of the contention of the eastern carriers who insist that a horizontal rate increase is necessary to their preservation. Mr. Willard has become the chief spokes man of a group of railroads affected, and while what he said had reference and the New York Central. Summarizing his views Mr. Willard said:

It has been found necessary for the B. & O. to spend $15,000,000 to $20,-000,000 a year to provide for facilities to take care of traffic along its lines. If conditions should now make it unattractive or unwise to put additional money into the property, to place additional facilities at the disposal of the public along the lines of the B. say that was a condition of crisis for people who look to the B. & O. to handle their traffic.
