ADMIRAL CHADWICK DEFENDS THE NAVY.

The boss comment on the navy which has followed Secretary Daniels' "prohibition order" has aroused Rear Admiral Chadwick to a defense of the service, such a defense as should be needless but which unfortunately has its idea. It is commended to those who have been so frequently favored of late with the implications that the navy secretary has snatched a brand from the burning, assertions which, by the way, do Mr. Daniels an injustice.

Whether the navy be a "prohibition" organization or whether it remain with the limited prohibition which has existed for so many years, one may rest assured that the officers may be trusted to act as becomes the service. The spirit and sense of honor of the navy are based upon a sounder foundation than upon any summary question. The whole is a question of character, and this, which is a thing which can only come from within, the navy has in a degree of which the country may well be proud. In its character, organization, fitness for its work, in its high sense of duty and honor, the navy stands easily in the foremost rank among the institutions which go to make our United States.

An "esprit and sense of honor" which is not based upon a sounder foundation than "any summary question" is not worth very much. The easy assumption that in the navy was to be found an exception was ridiculous on its face, although obviously galling to officers in the service. Admiral Chadwick's assertion that "the navy has made itself temperate by force of character" goes with the saying and this is much more satisfactory than temperance by edict.

WATERSON SPEAKS HIS MIND.

Democratic newspapers which have been speaking harshly to Senator Borah because of his prediction that the United States is embarking on what will prove to be a war of conquest may now try scolding Colonel Henry Waterston. "Mr. Bryan's hope of next year's Nobel prize goes glimmering," says the Louisville sage. "Andrew Carnegie's picture is turned to the wall." Mr. Waterston joins the jingoes with his old-time force:

Let us not deceive ourselves, nor be deceived. It is war. The cant of the hour makes many protestations; that we have no quarrel with the Mexican people; that we want no foot of Mexican territory; that we seek only good neighborhood; that peace and order are our sole objective points. But all the same, if the flag goes up across the Rio Grande, it will never come down.

The swelling act of this imperial theme—for that it is—may carry the Monroe doctrine to lengths never dreamed of by Monroe. It may be, as the far-seeing Senator Borah suggests, the beginning of the advance upon the isthmus. Yet, as Senator Lodge in his splendid substitute described, we have the warrant and expansion, as little as revolution, goes backward when headed south and west, the canal the first stop. "We mean not war," says Willson. "All aboard for Panama," says the boys.

This is looking into the future, further than what the colonel calls "the whine of the uplift crowd" makes respectable in this new day. But at any rate the United States will not turn back at Vera Cruz. The Americans who died there did not die that Villa and Carranza might get the presidency of Mexico.

We have no quarrel with the revolutionists, therefore while Huerta is blocked away from supplying the revolutionists will push forward steadily and irresistibly. The end should not be

Daddy's Bedtime Story

The Brownie's Trip to Dr. Brownie.

GOING to the dentist's always frightened Evelyn. Jack always went along with her, as it helped a great deal to have some one near by. But now Evelyn knew she must go again, and she was dreading it so much. "So my little girl has to go to the dentist's tomorrow?" said daddy. "Yes," answered Evelyn sorrowfully, "and I am sure I won't sleep tonight just thinking about it. He says he must pull it, and, oh, I can't bear the thought of having my tooth pulled!" "Dear me," said daddy; "I think I will have to tell you about the brownie's trip to the dentist, for I think his case was very similar to yours. This little brownie had had a toothache which had bothered him for some time, but he dreaded to go to the dentist's, just the way you do. The other brownies told him he'd better go before it became worse, but he kept putting it off and putting it off. "One day, though, it got awfully painful, and he felt he could stand it no longer. The pain was so dreadful he wanted something done to the tooth right away, and he didn't much care what was done if only his toothache went away. "That's what we were afraid of," said the other brownies. "Well, there's one thing about it," said the little brownie with the toothache; "now it hurts so badly I don't care a scrap if the dentist pulls it or not." He wasted no more time. He went right off to see the brownie dentist. He was a very clever dentist and very kind and gentle. "He sighed when he saw the little brownie with the toothache. I am sorry you've let it go so far," said he. "That's the trouble—people, brownies, everything and every one will always wait until they can stand the pain no longer before they go to the dentist's, and that is why we're considered such dreadful people to go to. Well, your tooth will be out in a jiffy." "Whereupon he got a pair of pliers, and after a moment or two Dr. Brownie said: "Well, here's the old toothache." "What, my tooth already out?" said the little brownie. "And to think of all I've suffered before I came to you!" "And I am quite gentle, then, you think?" "Oh, you're wonderful, and it is such a relief to think that that awful tooth is out!" "Daddy," said Evelyn, "that story has helped a lot, for now I'll go before my toothache gets too painful, and I feel quite sure now that I won't be hurt any more than the little brownie was."

WELSHY AND HIS ORANGE.

Oranges were first brought to England about the middle of the sixteenth century and found ready favor with those who could afford them. Curious use was sometimes made of the fruit soon after its introduction. Cavendish describes Cardinal Welshy as entering a crowded chamber "holding in his hand a very fair orange, whereof the meat or substance within was taken out and filled up again with the part of a sponge, wherein was vinegar and other concoctions against the pestilent airs, the which he commonly smelt unto passing among the people or else when he was pestered with many suitors.—London Globe.

OLD MAIDS.

All girls should marry when they can. There's naught more useful than a man. A husband has some faults, no doubt, and yet he's good to have about; and she who doesn't get a mate will wish she had one, soon or late. That girl is off her base, I fear, who plans to have a high career, who sides steps vows and wedding rings to follow some art or trade who in professional life, who in the professions, in a manlike swath, and old age finds them in the broth. A loneliness, as of the tomb, enshrouds the spinsters in its gloom; the Jim Crow honors they have won they'd sell at seven cents a ton. Their sun is sinking in the west, and they, unloved and uncaressed, must eave, as they bleakly roam, the girl with husband, hearth and home. Get married, then, Jemima dear, don't fiddle with a career. Select a man who's true and good, whose head is not composed of wood, a man who's sound in wind and limb, then round him up and marry him. Oh, rush him to the altar rail, nor heed his protest or his wall. "This is," you'll say, when he's been won, "the best day's work I've ever done."

OLD BOOK ADVERTISEMENT.

The advertising of children's books does not seem to have advanced in ingenuity since the time of old John Newbery. Here is a specimen of his art from the Morning Chronicle in December, 1767: "This day was published 'Nurse Truelove's New Year's Gift, or the Book of Books For Children,' adorned with cuts and designed as a present for every little boy who would become a great man and ride upon a fine horse and to every little girl who would become a great woman and ride in a lord mayor's gilt coach. Printed for the author, who has ordered these books to be given gratis to all little boys and girls at the Bible and Sun in St. Paul's churchyard, they paying for the binding, which is only twopence each book."—London Chronicle.

STRICT ABOUT GUNS.

Any one who handles a gun in Germany is held to more strict accountability than in America. A member of a hunting party in Prussian Saxony asked permission of a comrade to examine his gun. The owner handed it over, and while the man was examining it the gun was discharged, instantly killing a young woman standing near by. The owner of the gun was sentenced to one year's imprisonment, while the man who was handling the gun has to serve only a six months' term. The court held that the owner was criminally negligent in not withdrawing the cartridge. The man who held the weapon was treated more leniently because he was an inexperienced hunter.

NO PARTICULAR HURRY.

Brown and his wife were at a moving picture show. In the play on the screen the villain had just thrown the hero from a high cliff. "Oh," exclaimed Mrs. Brown, "I hope the officers hurry up and catch the wretch!" "Have patience, dear," said her husband. "The operator is turning the reel as fast as he dares."—Judge.

Ladies, What Is Your Time Worth in Dollars and Cents? A gas range will save you at least three hours kitchen work daily because you have no fires to build, no coal or ashes to contend with, no kindling to handle and you save all the time usually spent in waiting for the fire to catch-up and burn freely. If you do three hours less work daily for 365 days it amounts to 1095 hours in the course of a year, or on a wage scale of 25 cents per hour, a total of $273.75 WORTH OF YOUR TIME SAVED ANNUALLY. Now, a GAS RANGE will not only lighten your culinary duties but the actual saving in fuel bills is well worth consideration in every home where household economy is appreciated. If you cut your fuel bill down only 50 cents per week for 52 weeks you save in the course of a year the sum of $26.00 which is more than the actual cost of having a gas range installed in your home. Think it over then phone 69. Have our representative call. Let us explain our divided payment plan, that makes owning a GAS RANGE EASY. Asheville Power & Light Co.
