SOME FACTS ABOUT MEXICAN REPUBLIC

Area About One-Fourth That of United States—Population 16,000,000.

Washington, April 23.—The following information concerning Mexico was given out by the National Geographic Society in Washington today: It is interesting to note that the area of Mexico is practically as great as that of the United States between the Mississippi river and the Atlantic coast, the Great Lake and the Gulf of Mexico, varying in altitude from sea-level to 15,000 feet. Its climate is affected by these elevations and by a range of 18 degrees of latitude. Twelve hundred miles is the distance traversed in passing south from Juarez, on the northern boundary, to the capital, and 900 miles more to the southern boundary. The Gulf of Mexico and Caribbean sea coast line extends for 1,700 miles, while the Pacific ocean and Gulf of California touch 4,000 miles of Mexican coast.

Prior to 1835, Mexico, as a Spanish colony, and the United States covered approximately equal areas, but the Texas secession and the result of the Mexican war added nearly 1,000,000 square miles to our territory, and the extent of Mexico now is less than one-fourth that of continental United States. Mexico still has territorial expanse equal to the aggregate of Austria-Hungary, Germany, France, Great Britain and Ireland. The total area of the republic, 767,000 is less than that of Texas, California, Montana, New Mexico and Arizona combined.

The average density of population of Mexico approximates 20 per square mile, the most thickly populated portions, outside of the federal district, being the states of Tlaxcala and Mexico, the former being less than Delaware in size of about the same density of population, and the latter being nearly as large as New Hampshire, but with more than twice the number of inhabitants. The federal district, modeled after the District of Columbia, but of eight times greater area, is surrounded by the state of Mexico, the large population of the capital, 470,000, materially aiding in bringing the average to more than 1,200 per square mile. During nearly 300 years subsequent to the conquest by Cortes, Spain dominated Mexico. A century ago a bold effort for freedom was started, which eventually resulted in the republic of Mexico of today. More than half of the first century of Mexican independence was abortive, one century after another coming into temporary power, and a number of those acclaimed rulers, after brief regimes, meeting ignominious death at the hands of the people they sought to govern.

The form of government, adopted by Mexico follows in general that of the United States, having executive, judicial and legislative divisions. Each of the 27 states is represented in two houses of congress, composed of senators and deputies. Congress holds two sessions each year for limited periods. Each state has its governor and legislature, and is subdivided into districts, or counties, over each of which a "jefe politico" is placed. The districts having subsidiary municipalities and councils. The so-called autocratic feature of the government may be largely due to the fact that governors hold office with approval of the president; that jefe politicos have similar relations with the governors, and that the officers of the municipalities are generally controlled by the jefe politico.

The church and state are independent, and congress cannot pass laws prohibiting or establishing any religion. Of the 16,000,000 inhabitants, two-fifths claim direct descent from ancient tribes or families which are accepted as the basis of Mexican history. Two-fifths are of mixed native and foreign blood, the remainder being classed under the common appellation of "foreign."

The City of Mexico, 284 miles by rail west of Vera Cruz, and 7,480 feet altitude, is reached by two routes, climbing from the hot lands through difficult mountain passes, one of which closely follows the trail taken by Cortes in 1519, by Gen. Winfield Scott with American troops in 1847, and over which, 15 years later, the invading French troops passed. It is the most populous city. One-half of the railroad mileage of the country is between sea-level and 1,000 feet, and about an equal amount between 5,00 and 10,000 feet.

Standing by His Colors.
The box office man in a Broadway theater was called away for ten minutes and had to leave things in charge of a greenhorn. Before departing he explained in detail the prices of the various tickets, and the new man said he understood.
No sooner was the notice left alone than a woman appeared at the window.
"How much are the tickets here?" she inquired.
"Well," said the greenhorn, remembering his instructions, "the blue ones are $2, the red ones are $1.50 and the yellow ones are only $1."—New York Tribune.

Moral Lesson Learnt.
"Good for Squillips! I hear that since he quit drinking he has got rich."
"It's too bad to spoil that story, but it's the other way. Since he got rich he has quit drinking."—Chicago Tribune.

FRIDAY, MAY 1.
Matinee and Night.
Lyman H. Howe's Pictures.

Lyman H. Howe's Pictures.
There has been no greater exhibition of endurance and sheer nerve in the history of the world than Uncle Sam's fight with the forces of nature down "on the line"—otherwise better known as the Panama canal. It is this tremendous conflict waged by an army of 50,000 souls and mighty machines doing work with almost human precision which will be reproduced by Lyman H. Howe at the Auditorium next Friday evening. The film is in reality an astounding—moving—living pictorial review of a supremely organized and intelligent effort scored a marvelous triumph over difficulties. As such it appeals powerfully to all mankind but particularly so to the victors—to us Americans, and in order to form an adequate conception of how this 50,000,000 victory was won, every American should take advantage of the opportunity Mr. Howe offers.

Yellowstone park—that vast arena served by nature in the heart of the rocky mountains where numerous ryers are the contending gladiators is another big feature to be presented. The film shows strange forces of nature more furiously active than anywhere else on earth. The scenes of such a volcanic nature that the sound of fire seems to lurk everywhere, and as such they convey the real "atmosphere" of a region where fire and water have struggled for supremacy for the countless centuries. The views change instantly—to ride through, under and over the Gothard mountains between Italy and Switzerland, and take spectators to magnificent mountain scenery and giant peaks, through rugged gorges, and to quaint Swiss villages, again the scenes change—this time to the Paris zoo showing a splendid collection of animals at close range, some of them very little known, such as the rhea of South American origin, the alpaca, the African mountain and the acrobatic tamanda. Then come lively fishing scenes in British Columbia and equally vivacious views of tunny fishing near Palermo. A tumble through the ruins of Pompeii, produced in nature's own colors, imparts vivid impressions of the havoc caused by the historic earthquake centuries ago. Wood turning and decorating clocks at Saint Claude, Spain; symphonies of the sea, and a ride through the Montana canyon and over the Cascade mountains in Oregon on the Chicago Milwaukee
