

SECOND DRILL BY CAVALRY TROOP K

Next Exhibition Will be Staged at Riverside Park Tuesday Evening, Aug. 4.

Asheville people will be interested in the announcement made today that Troop K of the Fifth United States Cavalry will repeat its exhibition drill at Riverside park on the evening of Tuesday, August 4. This drill is to be given following a large number of requests made by citizens of the city, including both those who saw the first exhibition and those who were not so fortunate as to enjoy this exhibition. During this second drill, which will begin at 8:30 o'clock, there will be a concert by the First Coast Artillery band. This combination entertainment will be one of the most enjoyable of the season and it is expected that thousands will go down to Riverside for it. The troopers expect to make their next exhibition far superior to the first. The space in front of the grandstand will be enlarged so that the entire troop may participate in the evolutions, while some special feats of horsemanship will be staged that were not included in the former program. Announcement is made by the Asheville Power and Light company that seats to the grandstand for this exhibition will be given out to those applying in writing, two seats to go to each applicant provided a self-addressed and stamped envelope is enclosed with the application. There are only 700 seats available and these will be given to the first applicants. Additional seats for about 1000 people will be arranged around the enclosure.

RAY STILL LEADS IN POPULARITY CONTEST

The figures for the week ending July 20 in the popularity contest of the American Tobacco company show that Carl Ray of Winston is still in the lead with 163,245 votes and Jim Kelly of Durham is second with 160,060 votes. Weiser of Charlotte comes third with 80,943 and "Tiny" Stuart, late of Charlotte, fourth with 70,433. Schumaker of Raleigh is fifth with 46,681 and Corbett of Asheville sixth with a total of 49,715, while Andy McCarthy of Greensboro is seventh with 28,425. All of the others are very much below these figures.

Suffragette Identified.

Ayr, Scotland, July 24.—"Janet Arthur," the suffragette charged with attempting July 8 to destroy Robert Burns cottage here with a bomb has been identified by the police as Janet Parker, a relative of field marshal Earl Kitchener, a prominent figure in the Boer war.

Woman's World

Mrs. Catt, Noted Suffrage Leader and Orator.

MRS. CARRIE CHAPMAN CATT.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt is one of the most interesting and magnetic of the suffrage leaders. She began life as a teacher in Iowa, was superintendent of public schools at twenty-two years of age, went into the suffrage ranks as an active worker in 1888. Since then she has studied law and medicine and has the equipped mind of the woman who has traveled the world over studying conditions of women in all foreign lands. She is the president of the International Suffrage alliance and has addressed audiences in England, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Saxony, Bohemia, Prussia, Hungary and in Africa and the far east. Everywhere the charm of her womanhood won her admiration, and when the alliance met in Stockholm three years ago she was called all over Scandinavia "America's uncrowned queen."

Mrs. Catt is an orator as well as an organizer and a teacher of the suffrage school. Her written words bristle with oratory. She has spoken for the suffrage in every state in the Union save Florida, carrying her message before legislatures and constitutional conventions. On her return from Europe, where she has been attending a meeting of the International Suffrage alliance, she expects to take part in suffrage work in New York. The Empire State campaign committee is making many plans for fall. After election representatives from every state in the Union where women vote will assemble in New York. These women will be actual voters, women who have attained the standing of citizenship in their states and who have learned from actual experience what the privilege of the vote in their hands means. What they have learned they will endeavor to impress upon the doubting Thomases of the state.

QUEENLY KINDNESS.

How the Little Old Boot Seller Was Befriended by Queen Mary. The kindness and consideration shown by Queen Mary recently endeared her still more to the hearts of the British public. Some time ago a firm of boot sellers, which for years had enjoyed royal patronage, dismissed their manager for no other reason than that he was too old. He set up for himself in a small shop in a southwestern suburb and was hugely surprised and delighted when it was indicated to him that Queen Mary had heard of his dismissal and had resolved to transfer her patronage to him. And now the tiny shop sports the royal arms instead of the gorgeous premises from which the manager had been dismissed.

Removing Fruit Stains. Fruit stains are now in order, and two expert housekeepers have come forward with suggested remedies not generally known and yet labor saving. The first is pure glycerin. The stain is to be moistened with it before the article stained is sent to the laundry. It is claimed to be quite effectual, and 20 cents' worth of glycerin ought to last a year. The other remedy is spirits of camphor, applied as soon as possible or before the stain is wet with water or sent to the laundry.

Snap Fasteners For Neckwear. The fashionable high standing collars and ruffles may be made removable. Instead of sewing the ruff or collar into the neck of the dress sew snaps every two or three inches along the facing of the neckpiece and the corresponding parts at equal distances on the neck of the dress. In this way a neckpiece may be quickly transferred to another dress or taken off when a dress is hung in the wardrobe or packed in a suit case.

FABRICS FOR EVENING. Charming evening frocks are made altogether of net, dull rose or dull blue. Gray and white crepe de chine lace is used with bright colored taffets for evening gowns. White net frocks are best for hot weather dress occasions. Heavier textured satins are coming in for evening wear.

Good Form

The Traveling Bore. The really well bred traveler is quiet. She does not move about in a restless fashion. She does not complain of her fellow passengers. She remembers that she is only one of many thousands who are spending their days speeding over the surface of the earth.

There is a type of traveler who is a public nuisance. She boards the train with half a dozen small bags and packages in her arms and spends perhaps the first half hour of the journey getting them settled. When she gets herself settled she finds she needs find some infinitesimal object in the particular package or box that is in the most inaccessible position. When it is disinterred she settles herself again. Then she pulls down the shade to keep the sun out of her eyes and immediately thereafter runs it to the top of the window because the train is too dark. She fidgets and fumes because of the heat and worries because of the draft and scowls at the mother of a crying baby. And she makes her fellow travelers as unhappy as she herself is unless they are endowed with an active sense of humor.

Another unpopular type is the traveler who talks in a loud tone. Fellow travelers are treated to unwelcome details of some unknown relative's toothache or forced to hear a recount of the romance of second cousin somebody's young life.

The well bred traveler speaks in a low tone and refrains from recounting any bit of news that might not well be considered public property. Then there is the traveler who is careless of the comfort of the other travelers.

Tennis Luncheon. An appropriate luncheon can be given as a sequel or introduction to a tennis match. One of the most attractive was given around a table decorated in this way:

In the center of the table there was an oblong of green felt—a tennis lawn, of course. This was properly marked off with white chalk, and across the center was drawn a little net. Four small dolls dressed in white flannel were fastened to the green, and in their hands were tiny tennis rackets. To be sure, their pose was rather stolid for tennis players, but they were effective nevertheless.

The color scheme of the luncheon was green and white—with a cream of spinach puree, olives and celery, boiled halibut with white sauce and new potatoes with parsley, chicken breasts in aspic, creamed asparagus, pepper salad with cream cheese balls and wafers and tennis balls of ice cream. Of course the same balls when they are served at Christmas are dubbed snowballs, but they answered their purpose.

The place cards showed little water color sketches of tennis playing, and the favors were bunches of white roses and ferns.

Public Manners. The actions of some women in public conveyances and in public places at times invite severe criticism. Some women push and shove others in a way that suggests a state of savagery. It is a common habit of women deliberately to take another's place in line. The rule of "first come, first served" is ignored by the thoughtless majority.

Do not wrangle over paying the fare of a woman companion. Either pay it or let her pay it and then stop talking about the thing.

Women thus make themselves conspicuous in a foolish way, men laughing in a superior scorn at the weak, vacillating feminine mind. Decide to correct this error.

The action of a woman in public is the best test of her manners. After all, the behavior when there is no one looking is a fine criterion by which an individual should be rated. So be careful in public.

Courtesy For Sisters. A large, round table at a certain famous summer hotel accommodated a family the parents of which say they never intend to grow old. Hand some themselves, they were surrounded by four beautiful children, two sons and two daughters. The mother remarked with pride that each boy had a sister to care for until he or she married.

The effect of the arrangement was plainly evident to those who noted the attention the girls received. The boys had been taught to place their sisters' chairs at the table, to help them with their wraps, to see that they had all the necessary attention at the informal hotel parties—in short, to do all those pretty things that many boys never dream of doing until they have met the "one girl," who probably is some one else's sister.

Disposing of the Spoon. When drinking from a cup the spoon is left in the saucer. It should never be left for a moment in the cup, being used only to stir and dissolve the sugar.

Manners Make the Man. Manners are of more importance than laws, being the foundation stones of civilization.

The Spirit of Courtesy. Most of the rules of etiquette are based on kindness and unselfishness.

A PURSE FOR THE ARTILLERY BAND

Business Men Wish to Show Appreciation For Series Of Public Concerts.

For several years there has existed a feeling in Asheville that there should be an arrangement for public band concerts, daily if possible, at some point near the center of the city. The feeling, however, has never crystallized into anything material. Such an undertaking would cost a great deal of money and the business men have probably not felt that the time was ripe for such an expenditure as a tourist city.

This summer, however, the dream of citizens and business men of having such band concerts has been realized without cost to themselves. The First Coast Artillery band of Fort Moultrie, which is stationed at Camp Grove, the United States military students' instruction camp, has given a series of public concerts here during the past two weeks that have proved one of the big features of the summer season. The program has been arranged so as to have the band appear at all the leading hotels and public parks, and this program has been eagerly followed alike by citizens and visitors.

So gracious have been Capt. Preston Brown, in charge of the camp, and the musicians in furnishing Asheville with this delightful series of concerts, that a large number of business men have expressed a desire to show their appreciation in some substantial manner. They have been in a quandary as to the manner in which this appreciation might best be expressed. This question now seems to have been solved, it having been learned indirectly that the members of the band would accept a purse, although they expect nothing in the way of remuneration.

The Gazette-News therefore takes upon itself today the initiative of starting a movement to raise a fund for the members of the First Coast Artillery band that will in a crude way possibly, show to them the appreciation that is felt by Asheville people for their efforts in making the life of the city gay and the city a more attractive one in which to live or spend a vacation. All contributions to this purse will be received and acknowledged at this office or by Capt. Preston Brown, who will divide equally among the members of the band the amount that may be raised.

Glenn; second vice president, Albert Peterson; secretary Miss Maggie Rector; corresponding secretary, Miss Nena Hodges; treasurer, William Coleman.
