A great globe representing the earth is surmounted by an equestrian figure of Energy, and the figure standing erect in and first photographs of the figures are published on this page today.

The theme of the aculptor's work is the triumph of human energy over earth and ocean in the building of the Panama canal. The essential feature of the work is the lightness of effect in portraying a theme which, when attempted in aculptured groups or figures, would ordinarly be expressed in too heavy a mood. The details of the fountain are done in a bilthe creative spirit. The figures suggest folk lore and fairy tales. Such figures-and sprites were never seen of seen or land.
