Large sums have been spent by the Red Cross societies.

Paris, Aug. 12.—The "Societe de Secours aux Blesses Militaires", the most important of the three societies that compose the French Red Cross, has spent about $430,000 per month during the first year of the war up to July 1. The other two societies have spent together about $300,000 per month, which at the end of the first year will make a total of about $9,000,000 to which at the end of the first year will add million dollars in gifts of supplies from the different countries, bringing the total expenditures by the French Red Cross for the care of wounded soldiers more than $850,000 per month.

With this money the Red Cross has established over a thousand hospitals containing more than a hundred thousand beds, a hundred infirmaries, sixty canteens in railroad stations and one hundred and thirty relief posts near the front; in this work about 18,000 trained nurses and 15,000 auxiliary nurses have been employed. Of these 5 were killed in the bombardment of Rheims and 11 have succumbed to contagious diseases contracted while caring for soldiers in hospitals. One nurse has been decorated with the legion of honor, 80 have been cited in the orders of the day and 23 have been accorded the epidemic medal.
