Knitting Yarn For Sale—Biltmore Industries

We have made quite a quantity of Biltmore homespun knitting yarn, the same as is used in making our home-spuns. It will not shrink or fade. It is finer than the average yarn but a great many ladies are doubling it as they knit. We are selling it for $2.80 per pound. Most of it is gray, and we will have a large quantity of khaki by Wednesday or Thursday. We will soon be making full sized yarn, but we find there is such a demand for yarn that we thought it wise to let the ladies of Asheville know they could secure this yarn for the present, and although it is a little more trouble to use, it is very much better in quality than anything you can buy and a great deal lower in price. WRECK OF GERMAN U-BOAT DESCRIBED

By GERTRUDE LYNCH, Special Correspondent For The Vigilantes in Paris. Paris, Sept. 5.—(By mail)—I am the first and only American allowed to visit a German U-boat, lying captive upon an isolated strip of the Channel Coast. To reach this frightful thing, our party of journalists walked a half mile of beach along which we were repeatedly challenged by English and Belgian sentinels. Just at the side of a headline harbor the monster lay—a sinister, menacing object, seeming to typify the very essence of the Prussian soul, breathing in its death-agony the spirit of annihilation. This U-boat, 61 had been crippled by a blow from a French torpedo and had finally been forced to run ashore into the custody of a French commandant. The sea-air still held the odor of the petrol by which all that might be useful had been destroyed by its crew—electrical apparatus, microphones, telephones, periscope, all personal belongings. About the beach are scattered thousands of pieces of metal, twisted and torn, while the aft part of the U-boat, scorched and blackened, seems like the half-destroyed body of a leviathan. Eighteen torpedoes were found, six were missing. At first the captain of the U-boat stated that he had been 100 days away from his base and had sailed about the coast of Scotland. The French commandant said he did not believe him, and the German of-

Embarrassment

In all probability there is no state of embarrassment more acute than that which is suffered by the bald man who has to sit through a long sermon based on the text: "Even the hairs of your head are numbered." Philadelphia Inquirer, Wasting Her Time. "What do you think of a man who would spend his evening with his arm around the back of a girl's chair?" "Looks like wasting the girl's time. I'd let him spend the evening with the chair."—Louisville Courier-Journal. Healing a Difference Two men stood in the door of a postoffice, and one of them owned a horse, which was hitched to a post in front of the building. There was a man coming along the street, and one of the two men said to the other: "There comes old Blank. He and I don't want to have him bow to me. If he does I shall not recognize him." "I am sorry you have had a difference with Blank. I have always considered him a pretty good sort of a man. Can't you heal the difficulty?" "I don't see how it can be done. I am sure I shall not be the first to offer an apology." "I'll bet I can make the quarrel up in five minutes and neither of you will have to apologize." "How will you do it?" was asked. "Come along out to your horse. When Blank comes up here you stop him and ask him to look at your horse's mouth and tell you how old he is. He never owned a horse in his life and can't tell whether your's is five years old or fifteen, but there's no man living who doesn't feel a bit honored by asking him to tell the age of a horse. You just try it." It was tried, and when the peace-maker went away his friend and Mr. Blank were shaking hands.
