Lone, be my solitary hearth,
Whence peace bath fled,
And home-like joys, and innocent mirth Are banished; Silent and sad, I linger to recall

The memory of all
In thee, dear partner of my cares, I lost,
Cares, shared with thee, more sweet than joys the world can boast. My home, why did I say my home!

Now have I none, Unless thou from the grave again could st co

My home was in thy trusting heart,
Where'er thou wert;
My happy home in thy confiding breast,
Where my worn spirit refuge found a rest. I know not if thou wast most fair And best of woman kind; Or whether earth yet bearest fruits more rare

Of heart and mind; To me, I know, thou wert the fairest, Kindest, dearest, That Heaven to man in mercy ever gave, And more than man from Heaven deserved to have Never from thee, sweet wife, Came word or look awry, Nor peacock pride nor sullen fit, nor strife For mastery; Calm and controlled thy spirit was, and sure

Bo to endure : My friend, protectress, guide whose gentle will Compelled my good, withholding me from ill.

No art of selfishness Thy generous nature knew ! Thy life all love, the power to bless, thy bliss, Constant and true, Content, if to thy lot the world should bring Enduring suffering : Unhappy, if permitted but to share Part of my griefs, wouldst both our burdens bear.

My joy, my solace, and my pride I found thee still: Whatever change our fortunes might betide Of good or ill, Worthier I was life's blessings to receive

While thou did'st live : All that I had of good in other's sight, Reflected shone thy virtue's borrowed light.

The lute unstrung-the meals in silence ate We want to share : The widowed bed-the chamber desolate, Thou art not there,

The tear at parting, with the greeting kiss, Who would not miss? Endearments fond, and solaced hours, and all Th' important trival things men comfort call. Oh! mayest thou, if permitted, from above

The starry sphere. Encompass me with ever-during love, As thou didst here: Still be my guardian spirit, lest I be Unworthy thee; Still, as on earth, thy grace celestial give, So guide my life as thou wouldst have me live.

Tempus Fugit! now a youth ands with footstops fleeting, Decming every promise truth, Pleasure never cheating.

Tempus Fugit! we and care Manhood's bloom are blighting, Scenes and hopes once sweetly fair Fortung stern is smiting.

Tempus Fugit! hoary age Childhood sadly blending, Toys of infant years engage. Downward swift descending. Tempus Fugit! lo! a shroud

And a grave preparing, And the bier a sable crowd Thither slow are bearing.

Tempus Fugit! hark! a bell Solomnly is pealing, Strikes the car a funeral knell On the breezes stealing.

The Blind Boy. BY HANNAII F. GOULD.

Oh, tell me the form of the soft summer air That tosses so gently the curls of my hair; It breaths on my lip and it fans my warm check Yet gives me no answer, though often I speak ; I feel it play o'er me refreshing and kind, Yet I cannot touch it—I'm blind, oh! Im blind!

And music what is it? and where does it dwell? I sink and I mount with its cadence and swell : While touched to my heart with its deep thrilling Till pleasure, till pleasure is turning to pain; What brightness of hues is in music combined? Will any one tell me? I'm blind, oh! I'm blind!

The perfumes of flowers that hovering nigh, What are they? on what kind of wings do they fly Are not they sweet angels that come to delight A poor little boy that knows nothing of sight? The sun, moon and stars, never enter my mind-Oh! tell me what light is-I'm blind, oh! I'm blind SUPERIORITY OF AGRICULTURAL SUCCESS. -There is a beautiful circumstance connected with agricultural emulation. In many of the above pursuits of life, one man gets rich by making another man poor. He climbs the ladder by putting his foot on man's shoulder : or he builds his own dwell. ing out of the fragments of his neighbors, whom he has underminded. This is often a crying injustice, and inflicts many bitter mortifications, as arouses vindictive and tiger possions. Emulation in agricultural improvement enkindles no such baleful fires. A man can make no improvements in husbandry, without at once extending the knowledge and advantage of them to others. The enlargement of the capacities of the soil, and every increase of its productions. confers immediate benefit upon the whole community.

The Whigs of Massachusetts will hold a State Convention on the 7th June.

The Madisonian says,-" We are authorized by the friends of Mr. Fletcher Webster, now absent from the city, to say that a prosecution has been directed against the Editors of the Globe, for a libel on that gentleman, published in that paper on the let inst., after he was known to have left the city.

Mr. Editor,—Ferhaps it may not be un-profituble or uninteresting to some of the readers of the Planter, to have the result of a process of making manure, which I think will be profitable to me, if it renders the service that its appearance indicates.

On the 39th November last, after my hogs for slaughter had finished gleaning my fields, I made a pen about 40 feet square, and hauled into it the corn stalks off about twenty acres of ground—my hogs, 38 in number, were then put into it, and fed until the 9th December, when I killed 18 of them, and on the 21st December, 12 more, and on the 6th January, killed the remaining number 8.

containing 100 acres, situate in Henderson county, on both sides of the road leading from Robert Orr's to Benson's tumpine, including Hightowers' path; granted to R. Lewis and G. Benson on the 15th December, 1818.

My hogs were not of the largest size weighing when dressed, on an average, 126 lbs. When they were first put up, they eat five bushels of corn per day, which amounts to about 101 pints per hog per day, which will make, in the aggregate, 104 bushels corn fed to them, and this at 50 cents per bushel, (the market price at that time,) will amount to $52 124. When the corn stalks had become pretty well trampled, I omitted feeding my hogs in the trough, until they become quite bungry, I then scattered shelled corn all through the pen, and by this means, got my stalks turned upside down, and a considerable portion of earth mixed with them, by the rooting of the hogs. After my hogs were all slaughtered, I waited until it rained, when the litter in the pen was perfectly wet, I made two pens of about six or eight pannels each, of a size, I supposed, sufficient to hold all the litter; I then, with an axe, cut through the mass of stalks, about six inches apart. so that it could be more easily thrown up into the pen with the manure forks-in piling the manure, I endeavored to incorporate with it as much earth as could be conveniently obtained; when I had finished throwing into the kenp all the litter made by the stalks, I threw earth over the whole, as a shield, to prevent rain from washing off the essence of the manure. A few days after I had thus piled it, it commenced smoking, as if spontaneous combustion was about to take place, and my pens of manure diminished in height, about three feet, while this process was going on. About a week ago, I commenced on my pens, to hauf them in my cotton field, and as I cut through the heaps with spades and hoes, I found that the greater part of the stalks attended to: were completely decomposed, and those which were not, the outside or caney part, was so brittle that it offered but little resistarce to the hoe; and the pith, which is of a porous nature, and consequently, a great absorbent, appears to be completely saturated with the essence of the manure. From my heaps, I obtained twenty-five four-horse wagon loads, of as good looking manure as is generally taken from the stable. If it should be worth $2 per load, it would amount to $50-the worth of the corn fed to the hogs being $52 121 the difference between them, would only be $2121, in fatten. ng 38 head of hogs and the worth of the manure. The expense and labour of hauling the stalks to the pen, is but trifling; most planters pile and and burn them in their fields, deeming them more as a nuisance, in the way of cultivating the crop, than as a benefit to the land. Though Mr. Editor, " all that glitters is not gold," so I may be deceived as to the intrinsic valuable than it appears to be.
