Its dearest tokens only make me mourn;
Oh! let its memory, like a chain about thee,
Gently compel and hasten thy return.
Linger not long!

Linger not long! Though crowds should woo thy staying, Bethink thee—can the mirth of friends, though

Compensate for the grief thy long delaying

Conts the poor heart that sighs to have thee here!

Langer not long!

Linger not long!—How shall I watch thy coming,
As evening's shadows stretch o'er moor and dell,
When the wild bee hath ceased her weary hum. ming, And silence hangs on all things like a spell. Linger not long!

How shall I watch for thee, when fears grow stronger,
As night draws dark and darker on the hill!
How shall I weep, when I can watch no longer
Oh! art thou absent—art thou absent, still!

Yet I should grieve not, though the eye that seeth me, Gazeth through tears that make its splendor For oh! I sometimes fear, when thou art with My cup of happiness is all too full !

Linger not long!

Linger not long ! Haste-haste thee home unto my mountain dwelling! Haste as a bird unto its peaceful nest! Haste as a skiff, when tempests wild are swelling, Flies to its haven of securest rest! Linger not long!

Colic in the horse.

There are few diseases more troublesome or dangerous to the horse than the colic: and it is usually in the winter that its appearance is most frequent. One of the best descriptions of the disease and its mode of treatment, is to be found in Steward's Stable Economy, from which we have condensed the following:

"The horse is usually attacked by the colic suddenly. In the stable, he paws the ground with his fore feet, lies down, rolls, sometimes quite over, lies on his Lack, but at times, when the distension of the belly is not great, will sometimes lie still for several minutes. When the distension is great, he neither lies nor stands still a minute, but lies down and gets up incessantly, strikes his belly with his hind feet, and looks wist-fully at his flanks. When standing, he makes many and fruitless attempts to urinate, and the keeper or owner generally imagines there is something wrong with the water." Sometimes in the worst cases the swelling is very inconsiderable; but in all cases, as the disease proceeds, the pain becomes more and more intense; the horse dashes himself about with frightful violence; the perspiration runs off him in streams his countenance betrays excessive agony, and his contortions are not suspended for a

Sometimes he is attacked on the road. "If his pace is fast, he should be stopped at once. To push him on beyond a walk, even for a short distance, is certain death. The bowels are displaced, twisted and strangulated, partly by the distension, but aided a great deal by the exertion, and no medicine will restore them to their proper position." When death ensues, the bowels are $8,000,000. found inflamed, twisted, and generally ruptured.

In the treatment of colid, the first object is to arrest the fermentation that is the primary cause, and re-establish the diges-tive powers. "In mild cases, a good domestic remedy, in common use among old fashioned people, who have never heard of inflamed, spasmed or strangulated bowels, is whiskey and pepper, or gin and pepper. About half a tumbler of spirits, with a teaspoonful of pepper, given in a quart of milk or warm water, will often afford immediate relief. If the pains do not abate in twenty or thirty minutes, repeat the dose. Four ounces of spirits of turpentine, with twice as much sweet oil, is much stronger; but if the horse is much averse to the medicine.

turpentine is not always safe." "There is, however, a better remedy, which should always be in readiness wherever several draft horses are kept. Take a quart of brandy, add to it four ounces of sweet spirits of nitre, and three ounces of cloves. In eight days this mixture or tincture is ready for use; the cloves may still remain in the bottle, but they are not to be given. Set the bottle by, and label it dis-tinetly, "Colic Tineture." The dose is six ounces, to be given in a quart of milk or warm water, every fifteen or twenty minutes, till the horse is cured. Keep his head s'-night and not too high when it is given. Do not pull out his tongue, as some stupid people do when giving a drink. Give him room, and if he will not stand till the drink be given, watch him when down, and give it, though he be lying, whenever you can get him to take a mouthful; but give the dose as quickly as possible. After that, rub the body with a soft wisp, walk the horse about very slowly, or give him a good each Steam Ship, whether in politics or commerce bed and room to roll. In eight cases out —a correct and comprehensive Shipping List, in of nine, this treatment will succeed, provided the medicine be got down the horse's throat before his bowels become inflamed. or strangulated or burst. The delay of half may from time to time occur-a complete Prices an hour may be fatal. When the second dose does not produce the relief desired, the third may be of double or treble quantity. I have given a full quart in about an one sheet, a Newspaper, a Shipping List, and a hour, but the horse was very ill."

Bottles are generally used for giving medicine to horses, but unless the neck is wound with twine, there is danger of the horse breaking it with his teeth, and injuring himself with the pieces. A large horn, with a small point for insertion in the mouth, is preferred by many, as exempt from this danger .- Albany Cultivator.

Obeying orders.

The Duke of Wellington, it is said, is still fond of taking the field—not indeed against the enemies of his country, but against the enemies of the farmer's henroost, and enjoys a good "Tally ho!" as heartily as any sportsman going. Some time since, while hunting with a pack of hounds in Hampshire, the field came to a sudden halt, caused by a farmer's man staioned at a gate through which it was usual to pass when hunting in that country, whom his master, tired of the frequent trampling down of his crops by the red coats, which, however it might be sport to them, was next to death to him, had ordered to allow no one to pass on any pretence whatever. After having been civilly remonstrated with by the leader of the cavalcade, to no purpose, two or three of the gentlemen rode up and asked the "fellow" if he knew whom he was speaking to-glancing significantly to the duke. No, he neither knew nor cared—his master had given him his orders, and he meant to obey them. He was informed who it was he was impeding in his career, but to no purpose-not a soul should pass; so off went the whole cortege to seek a passage some other way. At night, honest "Johnny Raw" made his appearance at the farm-house.
"Well," said his master, "have the hounds been out?" "Ye, measter, sure cnow."

" Well, and what didst thee?" "What did I! why stopped the gemmen, o be sure."

"You did! brave, you're a good fellow." "But measter, who do you think I stop-
