W. ATKIN, RIETOR.

From the Review. JACK LONG: OR, LYNCH-LAW AND VENGEANCE.

[Continued.] From this time poor Jack was in hot water. Shortly after a horse was stolen from a rich and powerful Planter in the neighbor. good of the town. The enimal was a fine ine and the Planter was greatly enraged at ha losa; for he was one of those who paid " black mail" to the Regulators for protection from all such annoyances, immunity from tions not only by themselves, but from other quarters. He now called upon nem to hunt down the thief, as they were ound under the contract to do, and return the horse. Hinch collected his band with great parade, and proceeded to follow the trail. h was readily discoverable near the Planter's citer fro Late in the evening he returnthat after tracing it wit announce that after tracing it with ngs, evidently intended to puzzle pursuit, he of Jack Long's hat. This created price, for no one and suspected Jack gs as asserious as possible, attract. they looked after him from the g as great a degree of public curiosity as he ugainst Jack's religion to step outside the door puld to the farther investigation, which he will push his goo; but this time Molly was in a ae farther investigation, which professed to be carrying on for the purpose of hurry for the water, there was no time to get fixing the hunter's guilt beyond a doubt, the o was unexpectedly found tied with a la-rist, to a tree in a dense bottom near Jack's, path down the hill and reached the brink to the doctrine of " honor among thieves," ld be no greater or more unpardonmily come itted than to steal among " He must be warned to quit the try," was in the mouth of every body, he was warned. Jack with great simy gave them to understand-that he was ready to go-that when he was, he should at his lessure-but that if his conven nd theirs did not keepen to agree, they tive but force; and as no individual felt disposed to take the personal responsibility on himself of a collision with so unpromising looking a body. Hinch eager as he was, did not feel that the circumstances were quite strong enough yet, to justify the extremes he intended pushing his rengences to. Things rere not quite ripe, and Jack with all the hurah and excitement about him, kept even on in way, conquering and to conquer among hairy tribes, for some weeks longer.

agular instances of the most vite and wanpite now began to occur in various parts the region around. At quick intervals, able horses and mules were found shot f close to the dwellings of the Planters seemed without the alightest provocation meh unheard of emelty, but morely in revenge for some fancied injury. The er soon got out that all these soimals might erved to belong to those persons who nek Long. Then was noticed the fact that all of them were shot through This was at once associated with remark of Jack, and his odd feat in firing igh a bullet hole, at the shooting match. is seemed to designate him certainly as the ty man; and as animal after animal cond to fall, every one of them slain in the way, a perfect blaze of indignation ily against the wretches around; and he heard or on all sides. The whole country red, and the excitement became uniand intense. In the estimation of eve-, hanging, drawing and quartering, hing, any thing was too good for nonster. All this was most industri-nented by Hinch and his myrmidons, s had reached the proper crisis ity meeting was got up, at which Planters presided, and reso I that Jack Long, as a bod citizen, nehed and driven from the county mself very little trouble about of him. He had kept himse Per from every body that he was et ignorance of what was go-tawney hide in as frequent trophies to the glanced around into fi as usual with the spoils to his but. It was a bered in hell! The man's look was positively as usual with the spoils to his hut. It was a bered in hell! The man's look was positively snug little lodge in the wilderness, that home awful, and it dwelt fixedly upon one after antiqued addressing our Host in the same exof Jack's. It stood beneath the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing an cited tone-" Have you no cages for mail color was he ?" several broke in with breath. of Jack's. It stood beneath the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing an cited tone—" Have you no cages for madical reverse by the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing an cited tone—" Have you no cages for madical reverse by the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing an cited tone—" Have you no cages for madical reverse by the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing an cited tone—" Have you no cages for madical reverse by the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing an cited tone—" Have you no cages for madical reverse by the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing an cited tone—" Have you no cages for madical reverse by the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing and reverse by the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing and reverse by the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing and reverse by the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing and reverse by the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing and reverse by the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing and reverse by the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing and reverse by the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing and reverse by the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing and reverse by the shade of an other with an icy light that shot freezing and reverse by the shade of an other with a sha thicket which bordered a small stream. No alized as they were. The villians could not woods with rifle in hand? or does your con- tell in the dusk more than he was a dark trellised wines ran over it, nor garden flowers stand it, and began to shrink and shuffle be- founded Texas breed ghosts amongst other horse-say about the color of mine." nodded with gaudy crests about it. But the hind each other to avoid it, but it was too curious creatures?" gray silver moss hung its matchless draper, late! He had them all! Ten men! They "Not that I know of," said the Squire, long fringes from the old wide-armed oak were registered? "Kill him! Ha's smilingly interposing, as the fellow stopped ware the perfume and the sights the coy ex. the children weeping plaintively over her, and laughter, ran round the table, while Henry acting taste of a bold rover of the solitudes silence and darkness sell around the desolate drew a long breath, wiped his forehead, and must have. The fresh face of nature and her group, as the sun went down which had risen threw himself into a chair. Our curiosit breathing, aweet as childhood's, could alone in smiles upon the innocent happiness of that was irresistably excited and as Henry comsatisfy the senses and the soul of one grown simple family. thus in love with the freedom of the wilder. Nothing more was seen or heard of Jaco Long. His hut was deserted, and his family ness, The round, happy face of his wife appeared, nor did any know or care what greeted him with smiles from the door on he anninached, while his little boy and girl, out brown and ruddy, strove with emolous short steps pattering over the thick grass, to meet him first, and clinging to his fingers, prattle and shouted to tell their mother of his coming. He entered, and the pregious rifle was carefully deposited on the accostomed ' hooks' of buck's horns nailed against the wall. The amaking meal her tidy care had prepared was dispitched, and the hunting adventures of the day told over. Then he threw himself wit his great length along the buffalo robe on the floor, to rest and have a romp with the chil dren. While they were climbing over his large body, and scrambling to riotons jou about him, his wife spoke for some water children to give up their frolic, but Molly's wish was a strong law with Jack. Bound ng up, he seized a sessel and started for stream. He sprung gaily along the sacmed to scule the question of his crimi. class upon the path, he suddenly felt sor rity of those must clamorous against him thing tap him on each shoulder, and his pro ere horse-thieves themselves, yet, accordgraf impeded strangely. At the same i on each side of him, several of them holdi he end of the stoot raw-hide lasso, which h een thrown over him. He instally put forti all his tremendous strength in a conve effort to get free; and so powerful was his he sure skill with which the lasso had be rown, that bound him over either arm. eration, was sufficient to drag the six strnen who clung to the rope after him. neard the voice of Hinch shout enge Down with him! Drag him down !! A that hateful sound a supernatural activity pos-sessed him, and writhing with a quick spring that shook off those who clung around his limbs, he had almost succeeded in reaching his own door, when a heavy blow from behind elled him. The last objects which met his eye as he sunk down insensible, were the terror-stricken and agonized faces of his wife When he awoke to consciousness, it was to oak which spread above his hut. Hinch with a look of develish exultation, stood before him, his wife wailing with pitcous lamen ons, clung about the monster's knees-ti ildren, endeavoring to hide their faces in er dress, screumed in affright, while outside the group eight or nine men with guns in their ands stood in a circle. That was a fearful awakening to Jack Long, but it was to a new birth! His eye took in the whole details of the scene. His enemy grinned in his facwith wolfish triumph, the "quirt," with its long heavy lash of knotted raw hide in his band. He saw the brute spure her riclently from him with his foot, until she pitched heav-them shout with laughter. A sharp electric agony, like the riving of an oak, shivered along his nerves, passed out at his fingers and his feet, and left him rigid as marble. The murderous thong fell upon his white skin, whalking it in blue ridges, while the dull black drops spouted and rolled off to the ground.—

But he regarded it no more than did the oak above him, which swayed its moss-wreathed arms and shook its green leaves, as on any other day, in the wind; and when his wife as every harsh slashing sound fell upon her ear, ed her eyes with her hands, and cowered with her head on the ground, he seemed no nore to hear her than did the dead block on he lintle of his door. The man seemed to be dead, all except his eyes, and though Hinch, roused to frantic wrath by his unmoved air, ld shriek " mercy !" then shudder ; " Oh!

rev! what has be done?" while she cover-counties, varied greatly, and were determined I fired. He pits country seemed to be a true paradise of hunwere various rumors, but the whole affair was much for either, to make some excuse for logs, negroes, and all the et cetera insuring ound of exciting chases. One day several they were frozen in them; and the gla the purpose of rousing and driving out the "Ay! why didnt II I did not think a deer, who have a habit of always passing out defence, but of those eyes. The rifle from one line of timber to another at or near suspended but they continued fairly to the same spot, and these places are either upon my features till I conceived I coul known to the hunters from experience or ob-servation of the nature of the ground. At crept slowly along each lineament. T servation of the nature of the ground. At crept slowly along each lineam these "crossing places" the "Standers" are is, I caught myself shuddering tationed with their rifles to watch for the ghostly! After regarding me in ming out of the deer, who are shot as they about ten seconds, he seemed to by. On getting to the ground we were the rifle was blowly thrown back ito edge of a line of timber, over a mile grisly beard with his bony le the "Driver" penetrated it gle stride which carried him as with the dogs. On our side, the sport was he plunged into the bushes without a word, toward the Plantr's house, to purtake of a late dinner of game now enraged, and spurred my horse into the with him before the party should separate. It thicket after him as far as we could penetrate Soon after we ware scated, it was announced if I had seen the devil sure enough, and acthe absence of my friend, Henry, and one of be had left any tracks behind." Every body the neighbors, whose onme was Stoner. But this of yours? Catemounts, Buffalo, Horn, rendered up his shaggy coat, the panther his yet those eyes namovingly, with a cold search, strange creatures enough for a single country; satisfying myself, when suddenly a horse in faces of the men. - but, by George! I met something to-day burst from the thicket behind me, and went That regard was clinging and keen, as if the which lays them all in the shade."

ended to be remem- "What was it? What was it like?"

and that mild but most pervading odor dangerous!" panted Hinch, as he labored yet to catch his breath, "but you look flurried other. are skilful to steal from the more furiously with the lash. We will drop enough to have seen a ghost. What's haptable young grass growing, and a curtain over this scene. It is enough to pened?" "Yes, what is it?" "Out with The mount of delicate wild flow say that they left him for dead, lying in his it!" "Have you seen the Old Harry?" blood, his wife swooning on the ground with Such exclamations as this, accompanied by need, the whole company leant forward soon forgotten amidst the frequent occur, and myself went him since. By the stopping. The modes of chase, and the ani. blood, and ters. The prespect of rare sport, in all its to my great relief, I came upon an old disuned and quite pales. "Stoner's negro has been phases, proved too attractive for our philoso: wagon trail, which, though the winding way sent over by his wife to let us know that his unty was promptly determined on between ticular, yet went to show that I could not be and blood on the middle. He has been shot, s. My friend happened to recollect that a very far from some habitation. I was follow. gentlemen." We all rose involunnan who had removed from his native county ing it through a high, tangled thicket which this, and stood with blank white faces, look. virginia to Texas, and taken with him rose close on either hand; and stooping over ing into each other's eyes. "The me me wealth in property, had finally settled in my horse's neck was looking closely at the when the violent shying of my horse made another. "Yes," exclaimed several, "deouts. He was a large Planter, and receiv. me raise my eyes and by Heaven, it was villor ghost, that's the way it has be mough to have 'stampeded' a regiment of I tell you what, Henry, has occurred to n oons. Just before me on the right, ever since you finis ith one foot advanced, as if it had oursed in table. Our host forthwith placed at our the act of stepping across the road, stood a and while you rode with your head down, posel, not only his own time, but horses, tall, ghastly, skeleton-like figure, dressed in thought that you were he, for there are seve skins with the hair out-a co our emoyment to the fullest extent of every beard-and such eyes! It is impossible to minement the country afforded. We were imagine them. They did'nt move, at all in the long look he took at your face, he discounted the look a soon actively and entirely absorbed in a delly the shaggy, hollow sockets, more than if ored the mistake, and, after leaving you of the neighbors were invited to join us, and all of our forces were mustered for a grand, "Deer Drive." In this sport dogs are used, i come near dropping my gun, though he was hound and under the charge of the "driver," as he is called, they are taken into the woods for parties, each fleating up the der, and with an impatient tw ughter, I started in vexation at my stopidity and shouted. He did not turn his he tually went back to where he stood to see if dered, Henry was the man who did it. I drew a long breath. "I warrant you found every one thought they would be there direct. 'em cloven!" said one .- "Did'nt you smell out of hearing. How he managed to quie sul-." " Never mind what I smelt-I found that it would be vastly uncourteous of us to a very long moccasined track, or I should be vastly uncourteous of us to a very long moccasined track, or I should be vastly uncourteous of us to a very long moccasined track, or I should be vastly uncourteous of us to a very long moccasined track, or I should be vastly uncourteous of us to a very long moccasined track, or I should be vastly uncourteous of us to a very long moccasined track, or I should be vastly uncourteous of us to a very long moccasined track, or I should be vastly uncourteous of us to a very long moccasined track, or I should be vastly uncourteous of us to a very long moccasined track, or I should be vastly uncourteous of us to specify the variety of the very long moccasined track, or I should be vastly uncourteous of us to specify the variety of the vastly uncourteous of us to specify the variety of the variety o waiting. We sat down, and were doing undoubted justice to the face—there is no appeatized like the headlong excitement of the chase, out where the wilderness winds blow upon the chase, and any how." "Singular affair," was buzing out where the wilderness winds blow upon the chase, and any how." "Singular affair," was buzing out where the wilderness winds blow upon the chase, and any how." "Singular affair," was buzing a ground the table. "Hear me out?" thing supernatural. I think he must be some civility. He was a thick set, broad should tearing off over the plain with every indication of excessive fright, snorting foriously, Without noticing these questions, he con- his head turned back, and stirrups flying in said in a low voice, while the party move uneasily in their seats and looked at each > and walked with fid gety manner toward the window to look out, and turning with a serious face toward Henry, remarked." This is a very curious story of yours, and if I did not know you too well, I would suspert you were quizzing. Did you hear a gun after you parted with this hark-sider fellow you describe ?" a gun to risk getting lost again in going to it." ".Was it about a quarter of an hour by sun ?" (that is before sun-down) interrupted the Driver. "Yes." "Well, I heard a gun about that time on your side, but though He accordingly left tinued the Squire. "I can explain about the so him since. By the winding of that roud which puzzled you so. of here," he ex. It is a road I had cut to a nu trees we had rived on the ground. They were scattered about a good deal, but no replied, in rath. far from any given place where you would strike the road, so that you were no great distance at any time from where this meet occurred. We must turn out and look up this ing, and has shot him. He is one of Regulators though, and Hinch is a very ble hound. I shall send for him to be here in morning with the boys, and they will tr up, if he is the devil in earnest, and have mance before sun-down to-morrow." Ti of the inexplicable features of the affair, and as it was too dark to think of ac any thing to night, we had to content our-selves with a sound sleep preparatory for ac-ion on the morrow. Soon after day-break, we were awaken y the sound of loud binstering voices abou he house. I felt sure that this must be Him arty, and on looking out of the window saw recognized the voice of our host in abarp sisive altercation, under our window, with convinced me that it must be Hinch. I lists ened anxiously, and heard him swearing in round terms that Henry's story was all gammon, an "old woman's tale," that he didn't elieve a word of it; but if Stoner was must could only distinguish that the Planter's tone was angry and decided, when they moved on him, I cannot conjecture, (Henry fertunateed, ruffianly-looking fellow, wearing the pal pable marks of the debauchee in his bloomed person and red features.

We were soon under way. A ride of nearyou—when Henry, who was an impulsive, voluble soul, came hustling into the room, with something of unusual flurry in his manner, he ginning to talk by the time he got his head in to the door—

22d around the table. "Hear me out!" said person and red tentures.

We were soon under way. A ride of near-ly half the day through the accuse of yester. It has a directly exhausted, and it was not until after the incident I continued to the were soon under way. A ride of near-ly half the day through the accuse of yester. It has a directly exhausted, and it was not until after the incident I continued to the were soon under way. A ride of near-ly half the day through the accuse of yester. It has a directly exhausted, and it was not until after the incident I continued to the were soon under way. A ride of near-ly half the day through the accuse of yester. It has a directly exhausted, and it was not until after the continued to the were soon under way. A ride of near-ly half the day through the accuse of yester. It has a directly exhausted, and it was not until after the continued to the were soon under way. A ride of near-ly half the day through the accuse of yester. It has a directly exhausted, and it was not until after the continued to the were soon under way. A ride of near-ly half the day through the accuse of yester. It has a directly exhausted, and it was not until after the continued to the were soon under way. A ride of near-ly half the day through the accuse of yester. successful in recount that it finally led me out into a prairie, gestion, was successful in rec this of yours? Catamounts, Buffalo, Horn-the features of which I thought I recognized. place where he had witnessed the curior at umburs as ever. The bear bled fory, howling blasphemies at each blow, ed. Frogs, Centipedes, one would think were I stopped, I looked around for the purpose of parition of the evening before. On clo picked so clean, that it would have been ou tartled every one. It was the dis barse till nearly night, when elled to give up in despair, and

Watchman ! tell m of the night,

Watchman ! tall us of the might. Vatchman : let thy wand; Lot the Sen of God is come.

Slavery and the Church - The F Missions having resolved not av slaveholder as a Wissionary. a of the Southern Baptists is o the purpose of dissolving the the Northern Bantiste, in the be " old school" Presee or neglect to take such a lated immediately to free the eco shall be imported in