

THOS. W. ATKIN, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR

THE ASHEVILLE GAZETTE... The paper will be discontinued at the expiration of the year...

A Man Built in a Wall... We make the following extracts from Henry's Letters from Italy...

Prospect of a War... We entered the little town of Grogan (S. I. A.) and after a short stay...

A Visit to Tahiti... The Strategy—The Chiefs—The Harbor—The Mountains—Dresses—Females—Schools—Government—The Queen—And Cooking...

A Visit to Tahiti... A highly interesting portion of the narrative of the Exploring Expedition, by Captain Wilkes...

A Visit to Tahiti... The natives are generally to be found in their houses, in a circle, chatting, reading and singing...

A Visit to Tahiti... The children are fed upon poi, a sort of bread of breadfruit and taro...

Abolition in Kentucky... The entering of Cassius Clay seems to have done little favor in Kentucky...

Abolition in Kentucky... The party that seized and the party that followed and captured the slaves, were Texans...

Abolition in Kentucky... A celebrated traveler in Egypt, says the rich Hassan Bey has forty-two wives and one hundred and ninety-seven children...

A settled Commission has been established, and under this the Royal Authority includes the power of Veto, the commission of the Supreme Judges, and all officers connected with the Sovereign...

The young Queen is named Aunah, but is more usually known as Pomare IV. She is the sister of the late king, and grand daughter to that of Pomare I...

The cottages are of an oval form, usually about fifty or sixty feet in length, and twenty in breadth. The walls are formed of bamboos set in the ground, with intervals of about an inch between them...

The natives are generally to be found in their houses, in a circle, chatting, reading and singing, or smoking, unless they be, as before the case, asleep...

The children are fed upon poi, a sort of bread of breadfruit and taro, pounded together with a little sugar. The child is laid on its back, and is crammed with balls of poi...

The entering of Cassius Clay seems to have done little favor in Kentucky. Proceeding from the vain idea that because there are but 31,000 heads of families in that State...

The party that seized and the party that followed and captured the slaves, were Texans. We wash our hands of the whole business, but we must insist that the laws of the State be rigidly enforced against the outcasts who make our soil the theatre of bloody deeds...

A celebrated traveler in Egypt, says the rich Hassan Bey has forty-two wives and one hundred and ninety-seven children. The New York Sun has broken ground in favor of Mr. Polk as a candidate for reelection...

The party that seized and the party that followed and captured the slaves, were Texans. We wash our hands of the whole business, but we must insist that the laws of the State be rigidly enforced against the outcasts who make our soil the theatre of bloody deeds...

A celebrated traveler in Egypt, says the rich Hassan Bey has forty-two wives and one hundred and ninety-seven children. The New York Sun has broken ground in favor of Mr. Polk as a candidate for reelection...

Manufacturing in North Carolina... A series to the Carolina Watchman furnishes the following extracts from a report made to the Legislature of North Carolina...

The Report then speaks of our purchasing flour made at the North, and pork made in New York, Tennessee, and Kentucky, and proceeds: "With all the materials and elements for manufacturing, we annually expend millions in the purchase of articles manufactured at the North and in Europe out of our own raw materials..."

The Report then speaks of the difference in the expense of sending to market the raw, instead of the manufactured article—the exports and consumption of North Carolina, and proceeds with the following Whig doctrine and sensible remarks: "But the profits arising from the process of converting the raw material are not the only advantages attending the system..."

The Report notices the Geographical disadvantages we labor under in a commercial view: our remoteness from market, our sand bound coasts and the shoals and obstructions in our rivers, and comments at length as to our advantages in all the elements for manufacturing: it then, in contrasting black labor with white, makes the following fling at our mechanics: "What branch of mechanics have we in our country, in which we do not find negroes often distinguished for their skill and ingenuity?"

The Committee have thus, at a greater length than they could wish, presented their views on the policy of introducing the manufacturing system into North Carolina. They firmly believe that it is the only course that will relieve our people from the evils that now so heavily press on them...

As a party of pleasure were ascending Mount Tom a few days ago, a well dressed man, furnished with fishing tackle, accosted a lady, one of the party, who had loitered behind her companions to enjoy without interruption the beautiful scenery which lay along the rich valley of the Connecticut...

The lady was somewhat startled at the abruptness of this proposition, and her first impulse was to hurry on to her companions, but her dignity and self-possession prevailed, and she quietly turned to the stranger and said: "It was a very serious proposal to come from one who had never seen her before..."

The lady had seen much of the world—and held command in the fashionable circles of the South—and the "chivalry" had benighted the knee to her beauty and accomplishments, and the learned to the intelligence and cultivation of her mind. She had sailed triumphantly and unconquered through every matrimonial maze, and was thought of for a moment as a thing not to be thought of for a moment more; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment...

The lady had seen much of the world—and held command in the fashionable circles of the South—and the "chivalry" had benighted the knee to her beauty and accomplishments, and the learned to the intelligence and cultivation of her mind. She had sailed triumphantly and unconquered through every matrimonial maze, and was thought of for a moment as a thing not to be thought of for a moment more; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment...

The lady had seen much of the world—and held command in the fashionable circles of the South—and the "chivalry" had benighted the knee to her beauty and accomplishments, and the learned to the intelligence and cultivation of her mind. She had sailed triumphantly and unconquered through every matrimonial maze, and was thought of for a moment as a thing not to be thought of for a moment more; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment...

Manufacturing in North Carolina... A series to the Carolina Watchman furnishes the following extracts from a report made to the Legislature of North Carolina...

The Report then speaks of our purchasing flour made at the North, and pork made in New York, Tennessee, and Kentucky, and proceeds: "With all the materials and elements for manufacturing, we annually expend millions in the purchase of articles manufactured at the North and in Europe out of our own raw materials..."

The Report then speaks of the difference in the expense of sending to market the raw, instead of the manufactured article—the exports and consumption of North Carolina, and proceeds with the following Whig doctrine and sensible remarks: "But the profits arising from the process of converting the raw material are not the only advantages attending the system..."

The Report notices the Geographical disadvantages we labor under in a commercial view: our remoteness from market, our sand bound coasts and the shoals and obstructions in our rivers, and comments at length as to our advantages in all the elements for manufacturing: it then, in contrasting black labor with white, makes the following fling at our mechanics: "What branch of mechanics have we in our country, in which we do not find negroes often distinguished for their skill and ingenuity?"

The Committee have thus, at a greater length than they could wish, presented their views on the policy of introducing the manufacturing system into North Carolina. They firmly believe that it is the only course that will relieve our people from the evils that now so heavily press on them...

As a party of pleasure were ascending Mount Tom a few days ago, a well dressed man, furnished with fishing tackle, accosted a lady, one of the party, who had loitered behind her companions to enjoy without interruption the beautiful scenery which lay along the rich valley of the Connecticut...

The lady was somewhat startled at the abruptness of this proposition, and her first impulse was to hurry on to her companions, but her dignity and self-possession prevailed, and she quietly turned to the stranger and said: "It was a very serious proposal to come from one who had never seen her before..."

The lady had seen much of the world—and held command in the fashionable circles of the South—and the "chivalry" had benighted the knee to her beauty and accomplishments, and the learned to the intelligence and cultivation of her mind. She had sailed triumphantly and unconquered through every matrimonial maze, and was thought of for a moment as a thing not to be thought of for a moment more; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment...

The lady had seen much of the world—and held command in the fashionable circles of the South—and the "chivalry" had benighted the knee to her beauty and accomplishments, and the learned to the intelligence and cultivation of her mind. She had sailed triumphantly and unconquered through every matrimonial maze, and was thought of for a moment as a thing not to be thought of for a moment more; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment...

The lady had seen much of the world—and held command in the fashionable circles of the South—and the "chivalry" had benighted the knee to her beauty and accomplishments, and the learned to the intelligence and cultivation of her mind. She had sailed triumphantly and unconquered through every matrimonial maze, and was thought of for a moment as a thing not to be thought of for a moment more; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment...

Manufacturing in North Carolina... A series to the Carolina Watchman furnishes the following extracts from a report made to the Legislature of North Carolina...

The Report then speaks of our purchasing flour made at the North, and pork made in New York, Tennessee, and Kentucky, and proceeds: "With all the materials and elements for manufacturing, we annually expend millions in the purchase of articles manufactured at the North and in Europe out of our own raw materials..."

The Report then speaks of the difference in the expense of sending to market the raw, instead of the manufactured article—the exports and consumption of North Carolina, and proceeds with the following Whig doctrine and sensible remarks: "But the profits arising from the process of converting the raw material are not the only advantages attending the system..."

The Report notices the Geographical disadvantages we labor under in a commercial view: our remoteness from market, our sand bound coasts and the shoals and obstructions in our rivers, and comments at length as to our advantages in all the elements for manufacturing: it then, in contrasting black labor with white, makes the following fling at our mechanics: "What branch of mechanics have we in our country, in which we do not find negroes often distinguished for their skill and ingenuity?"

The Committee have thus, at a greater length than they could wish, presented their views on the policy of introducing the manufacturing system into North Carolina. They firmly believe that it is the only course that will relieve our people from the evils that now so heavily press on them...

As a party of pleasure were ascending Mount Tom a few days ago, a well dressed man, furnished with fishing tackle, accosted a lady, one of the party, who had loitered behind her companions to enjoy without interruption the beautiful scenery which lay along the rich valley of the Connecticut...

The lady was somewhat startled at the abruptness of this proposition, and her first impulse was to hurry on to her companions, but her dignity and self-possession prevailed, and she quietly turned to the stranger and said: "It was a very serious proposal to come from one who had never seen her before..."

The lady had seen much of the world—and held command in the fashionable circles of the South—and the "chivalry" had benighted the knee to her beauty and accomplishments, and the learned to the intelligence and cultivation of her mind. She had sailed triumphantly and unconquered through every matrimonial maze, and was thought of for a moment as a thing not to be thought of for a moment more; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment...

The lady had seen much of the world—and held command in the fashionable circles of the South—and the "chivalry" had benighted the knee to her beauty and accomplishments, and the learned to the intelligence and cultivation of her mind. She had sailed triumphantly and unconquered through every matrimonial maze, and was thought of for a moment as a thing not to be thought of for a moment more; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment...

The lady had seen much of the world—and held command in the fashionable circles of the South—and the "chivalry" had benighted the knee to her beauty and accomplishments, and the learned to the intelligence and cultivation of her mind. She had sailed triumphantly and unconquered through every matrimonial maze, and was thought of for a moment as a thing not to be thought of for a moment more; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment...

Manufacturing in North Carolina... A series to the Carolina Watchman furnishes the following extracts from a report made to the Legislature of North Carolina...

The Report then speaks of our purchasing flour made at the North, and pork made in New York, Tennessee, and Kentucky, and proceeds: "With all the materials and elements for manufacturing, we annually expend millions in the purchase of articles manufactured at the North and in Europe out of our own raw materials..."

The Report then speaks of the difference in the expense of sending to market the raw, instead of the manufactured article—the exports and consumption of North Carolina, and proceeds with the following Whig doctrine and sensible remarks: "But the profits arising from the process of converting the raw material are not the only advantages attending the system..."

The Report notices the Geographical disadvantages we labor under in a commercial view: our remoteness from market, our sand bound coasts and the shoals and obstructions in our rivers, and comments at length as to our advantages in all the elements for manufacturing: it then, in contrasting black labor with white, makes the following fling at our mechanics: "What branch of mechanics have we in our country, in which we do not find negroes often distinguished for their skill and ingenuity?"

The Committee have thus, at a greater length than they could wish, presented their views on the policy of introducing the manufacturing system into North Carolina. They firmly believe that it is the only course that will relieve our people from the evils that now so heavily press on them...

As a party of pleasure were ascending Mount Tom a few days ago, a well dressed man, furnished with fishing tackle, accosted a lady, one of the party, who had loitered behind her companions to enjoy without interruption the beautiful scenery which lay along the rich valley of the Connecticut...

The lady was somewhat startled at the abruptness of this proposition, and her first impulse was to hurry on to her companions, but her dignity and self-possession prevailed, and she quietly turned to the stranger and said: "It was a very serious proposal to come from one who had never seen her before..."

The lady had seen much of the world—and held command in the fashionable circles of the South—and the "chivalry" had benighted the knee to her beauty and accomplishments, and the learned to the intelligence and cultivation of her mind. She had sailed triumphantly and unconquered through every matrimonial maze, and was thought of for a moment as a thing not to be thought of for a moment more; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment...

The lady had seen much of the world—and held command in the fashionable circles of the South—and the "chivalry" had benighted the knee to her beauty and accomplishments, and the learned to the intelligence and cultivation of her mind. She had sailed triumphantly and unconquered through every matrimonial maze, and was thought of for a moment as a thing not to be thought of for a moment more; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment...

The lady had seen much of the world—and held command in the fashionable circles of the South—and the "chivalry" had benighted the knee to her beauty and accomplishments, and the learned to the intelligence and cultivation of her mind. She had sailed triumphantly and unconquered through every matrimonial maze, and was thought of for a moment as a thing not to be thought of for a moment more; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment; and she raised her form to more moment...