[From the Western Democrat.] A CHAPTER.

And it came to pass in the latter year of the reign of Thomas, the son of Bragg, who reigned over the province of North Carolina whose border extendeth even to the great sea on the east, that the people began to cast about in their minds, saying where shall we look for another ruler.

And they took counsel together, and said let us sand wise men to the great city which is called Charlotte, two day's journey from the mountains on the west.

And let them choose out for us a man of mmunication of this kind with the most wroth with Duncan, and said among them- Intended Descent Upon Sonora. Vote for Governor tender or affectionate caresses, accompanied selves how can this man give us land, seeing with a kind look and pleasant word of some he is without power like unto ourselves. And behold, Duncan sent greetings to the great captains of the whigites and the knowthing of the kind, constantly repeating the nothingites, saying get you down into the same words with the same kind, steady tone plain with your mighty men of war, and let of voice; for the borse soon learns to read the us set up the great hungus fungus, even the from expression of the face and voice, and will bumbugabus-taxabus, and frighten the people pas know as well when fear, love or anger prevails so that they exait not John the son of Ellis. And it was so, that on the fifth day of the tim eighth month the people came together for Sou to cast losts for their ruler, and many of the dree wise men of the whigites refused to fight Min against the people.

And the thing which they did made Syme | Ka or turns his heels to kick you, he has not the philistine angry, and he cursed them in

And Duncan went out and sounded the on great ramskinabus, even the ringdum-bobo- ed. a few sharp cuts with the whip about the link a dooden, which he brought from beyond mo legs, pretty close to the body. It will erack the great sea, even from the city of the

And behold, the people were not frighten. we as the stroke, besides, one sharp cut about ed but waxed strong, and strove with Duncan the legs will affect him more than two or the son of Mac, and Syme the philistine; and

> And it came to pass that the lot fell upon John the son of Ellis; and the people were glad and gave a shout, and rushed upon the humbugabus and smote it that it fell, and they spoiled the hungus fangus from the borders of the Keittites on the south even to the great hills toward the going down of the sun and the borders of the Virginites on the north.

And the people allowed Duncan the son of Mac to escape alive into his own city, and the land had rest.

And behold, Duncan "heard something drap."

And the rest of the acts of the people are they not recorded in the papers.

The Whole Story.

wisdom and understanding and unto him will we hearken.

And it came to pass that on a certain day these wise men began to assemble in the city of Charlotte, wherein aforetime valient deeds had been wrought during the battles of the great kings.

And they came even from the borders of the Virginites to the borders of the Keittites and the entering in of the great river on the east, insomuch that the inns of the great city were unable to contain them.

And behold, a mighty man named Jennins, whose surname was Kerr, who dwelleth by the street that leadeth towards the north gate of the city, stood up in the midst of the people and said :

Seek ye out four young men who shall go out and find lodgings for the strangers in the city, and lo ! they shall eat at my table.

Now Jenuins, the son of Kerr, was possessed of corn and oxen, and much sheep. And the men marvelled greatly at the light and glory of the city.

And it was so, that when the young men had made an end of lodging the strangers, behold the city was quiet and they all slept. And on the morrow they rose up and sat at the table of Jennins, and were filled.

Then the men with one accord began to any Jennins is some greatly to be praised .-And the thing which he did pleased the people.

And straightway they began to assemble in the council chamber where the judges were wont to judge the people.

And they reasoned one with another and did cast lots; and behold, the lot fell upon John the son of Ellis, who was one of the Judges of the people, a man comely to look upon and of great wisdom, who dwelt in a city about a day's journey to the north.

And the wise men proclaimed it from Dan even to Bersheba, and counselled the people, saying let us exalt John the son of Ellis to rule over us, that it may be well with us and our little ones in the land of our fathers.

And the wise men returned unto their own villages; and the thing which they did pleased the people; and they took of the finest of the wheat and did make cakes, and killed the fatlings of the flocks, and rejoiced exceedingly. Mow it came to pass while the people were rejoicing, that Duncan the son of Mac. whose sur-name was Rae, who aforetime had troubled the people, insomuch that Pierce the tetrach caused his young men to send him to the fended city of the heathen that lieth over among the people. young man and of great powers of speech, and had dwelt in the city of the heathen for the space of four years; and hearing that his gether. people were about to choose a ruler, he took shipping and came into his own country from whence he had departed, for he was a man of great spirit and wanted to be ruler. And it was so, that when Duncan appeared the people were troubled, and he lodged with one Syme, a printer, a mighty captain among the philistines, whose house is in the city of the great ruler.

Says the Philadelphia Journal, under this head-"A young man named James Powers was hanged at Washington or the 10th inst. for murder. Just before mounting the scaffold he bade his brother farewell, and said:-"Remember what I told you-let the liquor alone." The same counsel has gone from a thousand scaffolds in this country, and its echoes are heard in many a prison cell. We waste much breath and ink in speculating upon the causes of crime and its extraordinary increase of late years. But the confessions of the criminal tell the whole truth of the matter. It is rum that makes demons out of men of originally good impulse; it is rum that is filling our prisons, feeding the gallows and diminishing the security of life and property. Under its accursed influence men who, when sober, would die rather than commit a dishonest action, scruple not to perpetrate forgery, robbery and murder. Of all the propositions for the prevention of crime.

we are strongly persuaded that there is none of equal efficacy with the simple advice of young Powers-"Let the liquor alone." And the Cayuga Chief, in its usual strong and nervous style, takes up the echo and reiterates: "LET LIQUOR ALONE !" Brief, but terribly expressive. Pale lips have uttered for ages from the scaffold, and yet its eloquence has scarce been heard above the base of the infernal anthem which ever goeth up from the hells of the land.

Poor Powers left the solemn injunction with his brother. They parted hands at the gallows, and he who was once lovely and pure in innocence and watched over by a mother, swung off a red handed murderer. The gallows preaches in vain, however .---Its last solemn warnings are unheeded. Its rum made victims stand up in the shadows of the dark valley and proclaim their startling utterances to those who hear not. The

The accident was proven to have occurred from the drunken folly and mismanagement of the slave. There is a law of that State which makes the seller of liquor to a slave liable for all the consequences from the use of the liquor by the negro.
