What Sort of Peace!

From the Charleston Mercury. If, to-morrow, an armistice were pro posed by the United States for the purpose of arranging a peace, what 'terms could the Confederate States make ! As a result of the defensive policy of our Government, the United States have possession of the whole of Maryland, and very large portions of Virginia, Kentucky, and Missouri. They have, in addition, Hatteras Port Royal, Fort Pickens, Key West, Tortugas, and Ship Island. For the surrender of these possessions, what equivalents have the Confederates States to offer? We know of nothing except special commercial advantages, We might give them the same free trade which they have heretolore enjoyed under the old Union. This is commercial reconstruction-a concession fatal to Southern independence. With the advantages already possessed by the North under the fostering care and favoritism of the old Government, Southern competition would be hopeless. The South would again pass under vassalage to the North in trade and manufactures-the old relatiods of superier and inferior would be eetablished. Is this the sort of peace for which the Union was dissolved, and for which we have fought and bled and suffered? Is it such as the people of the Confederate States are willing to endorse and accept? We sincerely trust not. Then, if such a peace will not be submitted to, there is only one alternative; and that is, to drive the enemy from Southern soil. It is necessary to redeem Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky, and Missouri, by fighting and winning victories. In our opinion, it would have been wise to have done it by Southern manhood and skill in arms in the first flush of Secession, before the people of the North became acquainted with the use of arms. But that time has passed. It is now a matter of regular war and military skill, and activity and energy. Terms of peace will not be offered us until European nations, pinched by the cotton famine, raise the illegal blockade of our ports. The certainty of this result and our strength, depends upon the question of who will suffer most and starve first -the people of the Confederate States or of England? No one supposes that starvation will ensue here, by holding our cot ton. However annoyed and embarrassed we, at least, have enough to eat. Millions of Englishmen will not have food to eat, for the want of their accustomed work, connected with American cotton. In that dense population, the loss of employment to so many is the loss of bread. Millions of starving laborers will compel the existing administration to get the cotton, or will have another administration in power that will get cotton, and with it their bread The Confederate States are, therefore, stronger than Great Britain in the matter of the blockade. One or the other has to get rid of it; and, as we can hold out long.

est. Great Britain necessarily must raise the blockade. It is only a question of persistence in keeping the cotton on our part, and of our great ally, Time. A few weeks, more or less, will settle the business. When the blockade is raised, by European necessities, we shall be in a condition to sell our produce and supply ourselves with all the materials of war. The present superiority of the United States, their navy, will be nullified. Our credit and our means will be abundant, while the credit and means of the North will continually ELTABLISHMENT fall. We will be in a position to raise and equip, in the best manner whatever number of troops may be desirable to conquer a peace of perfect independence - commercial as well as political. It will, therefore, be our plain policy to reject any overtures of peace made to us at the raising of the blockade. No satisfactory peace can then be made. Concessions on our part will be weak, and gratuitous, and dangerous. With foreign trade opened, we can command our own terms in no long space of time. Let us 7.00 A. M. prepare to fight on, nor delude ourselves with the idea of an immediate peace, which | 8.40 must make us dependent. When the blocks ade is raised, then "Richard is himself again." We want no odds, and shall ask 11 no favors. Until that event, we are at great disadvantages. Every dog has his 12,17

The Slaves. The Wilmington Journal says:

Staves every day make, or attempt to make, their escape to the Lincoln blockade. Any slave caught so attempting ought to be hung on the nearest land to the point where caught. Any white man convicted of aiding or abetting, ought to share his fate. Things of this kind must be stopped by some acts of apparent, but necessary rigor. The country can better afford to pay for a few examples than it can to allow its citizens to be betrayed and plundered.

THE NORTHERN BOMBARDMENT .- A Madrid journal declares that the plan of the London Cabinet, in case of a war with the along with many others, of doing at least twice as much work, and doing it better, than any other Mill in use—it can be run by Steam, Water or Horse Power. The Mulay may be seen at the Shop at any time.

HENRY ALEXANDER,

The Mulay may be seen at the Shop against Portland, Boston and New York. Another fleet will attack Fortress Monroe, and ascend the Potomac to Washington.

MEMPHIS, Feb. 11. - We have sustained a heavy loss in steamboats, on the Tennessee River, in consequence of the invasion. The gun boats Lexington, Conestogo and

Sam Orr, with 17,000 pounds powder, and two submarine batteries, were set fire to at 8 o'clock this evening, ten miles above the Tennessee River Bridge. On Friday and Saturday the Appleton, Belle, and Lynn Boyd burnt the Confederates at the mouth of Duck River-Sam Kirkman and Julius Time. The latter, with one hundred thousand dollars Govnary Hoop skirts comprised of from 10 to 50 hoops and burnt on Saturday. The Dunbar, sunk at Cypress Creek is at East Port, repairing. The Confederate Gun Boat sunk is the Cerra Gordo. The Sallie Ward is the only one captured by the Federals. The Robb is the only one that escaped. The Federal gun boats have left the 20,000 pounds of Confederate salt Pork. from Florence, but refused to touch private property, even cotton. The passenger trains have resumed on the Charleston Road. It is reported that the Federals are concentrating in large force in the vicinity of
