THE BATTLES BEFORE RICHMOND .- WE are indebted to the Montgomery Advertiser for the following statement of the killed wounded and missing of our army in the tate battle before Richmond. The Advertiser, of Wednesday, gives the name of each regiment, with its number and loss. es, andsays that its table "has been caretully compiled from various sourcea, and is, probably, as correct as any statement which is not based on the official figures in the War Department." The following is the recapitulation of the Advertiser's ta-

We give this statement of the Adverti ser as an approximation to accuracy. From data in our possession, we estimate that it talls from twenty to twenty-five per cent below the true figures. Our total casualties cannot have been less than 15,000. We are confident they did not materially exceed that number .- Richmond Whig.

From York River. Our advices from the country bordering on York river (says the Richmond Dispatch,) are as late as Saturday last .-Up to that period a small force of the enemy continued to occupy a point in New Kentcounty, known as the "Brick House," but not one had visited West Point since the grand flight of the gunboats and stransports immediately after McClellan 'changed his base.' They doubtless find more scope for their thievish propensities on the Peninsula between James and York rivers, where a direct communication with Fortress Monroe affords them greater security. Two prominent citizens of Gloucester have lately been arrested by the Confederate authorities for trading with the Yankees, though it is believed that their transactions were prompted rather by supidity than by any design of return ing to "their allegiance under the old flag." Such men are found in every community, and it is perhaps well enough to make an example of them. Many of the people of that county, heretotore in comfortable circamstances, are now suffering for the want of necessities of life, and have no means of purchasing. Not long since, two ranaway negroes boldly returned to Gloucester for the purpose of carrying off beir families, but unexpectedly fell into a trap, were secured, and brought to Richmond with their wives and numerous off-A good many persons, taking warning by the experience of others, are sending their negro property to market, or to some place in the interior where they will be less exposed to the temptations of the pertidious enemy.

Plain talk for the Yankees.

The Westover correspondent of the Philadelphia "Inquirer" writes in the following plain style, under date of July 28th: Our soldiers at his point are looking anxously North for the promised reinforcements. There is not a private in the army that does not know if we are not reinforced we are at a dead lock. It is a notorious tact that it was known in the North, as much as in the South, that Beauregard was reintorcing the Confederate Army detending Richmond. No notice was taken of it North. The result is known.

Holding public meetings does very we'll to keep up a war excitement; but we want something more substantial-we want anea. The States should go at once into drafting. It is the only proper way to raise a force sufficiently large to prove of effect. The slow process of recrutiting 300,000 men will be the ruin of this army, without they come up faster than they have been doing, according to the newspaper reports. We must be reinforced largely, or all is

Among the recent arrivals in this city from Yankee land, is the Rev. A. J. Wither spoon, of Lincoln, Marengo, Ala. Mr. W. is direct from Fort Johnson, Sandusky Island, Ohio, having left there on the 4th instant. He is chaplain to the 21st Alabama Regiment, and was taken prisoner at Shiloh, on the second day of that great fight, while humanely ministering to the necessities of the wounded Yankees as well as Contederates. He was carried before Gen. Buell, who although informed by Mr. W. that he was a minister of the gospel, and a non-combatant, having neither pistol, gun, sword, nor bowie knife, persistently refused to release him, but Douglas, near Chicago; next at Camp Chase, Columbus, Ohio; and was next sent to Sandusky Island, where the days of his captivity ended. He says he met with warm friends everywhere, but especially at St. Louis and at Columbus. At the latter place, Mrs. Judge Clark, was unremitting in her attentions to the sick and wounded, and caused to be prepared daily, such delicacies and luxuries, as she knew would be acceptable to the feeble, and much delilitated prisoners. The repients of these much needed attentions, will ever cherish with fund recollection the kindness of this noble weman. Mr. W. thinks there are many in the northwest who would gladly close this war immediately, were it in their power to do so, while others openly denounce us, and invoke curses upon the heads of the South- day the manufacturer of iron, of cloth, of ern people, for having broken up the great- wood, of leather, enough, at least, for all est and the best government on earth, and | military purposes. Mr. Witherspoon is looking well, after his long confinement, and says his treatment, which has not been as kind as it might have been, has nevertheless been much beter than that represented by prisoners from Fort Delaware. He was not furnished transportation until he reached Fortress Monroe, where Gen. Dix had him forwarded to city Point, free of charge. The examining officer at the Fortress, seized a carpet bag filled with a bible and late northern and western papers, declaring the bag and contents contra-

The Duty of the Hour-The South in this War-The Prospect-What shall

The New York Independent has an article on the Administration and the conduct of the war, of which the following are mild specimens:

In the beginning of this great struggle the question among loyal men was, how shall we save the nation? One year of fighting and the question is, whether we can save it? That is the question of to-

We do not write to blame, but to judge, Unless we are wiser than we have been. we have outlived our nation. Look at

The South has had more than wisdom civil and military; she has had sagacity. After Mr. Lincoln's election not one single State, except South Carolina, cast a popular majority for secession. Yet every sent him along with all the wounded Con- State second except Delaware, Maryland lederates to Pittsburg Landing. Mr. W. and Kentucky. There was a divided pubstopped a while at St. Louis; then at Camp | lic mind, a large undertone Union feeling in the South even after the war began. It is absurd to talk of any such thing

now. There never was such a revolution of popular feeling on record. Dislike has become hatred. With insignificant exceptions, the South is a unit in intense and unchangeable hatred of the North. By volunteers, by drafting, and by conscription she has placed in the field an extraordinary force.

With all her scaports scaled, with no important foundries, straightened for every single element in the manufacture of munitions and equipments, the South has armed her men so formidably that our men would rather lie behind breastworks than meet them in the field. Accustomed to import from the North almost every article of living, the South has become in a has extracted from this element a double power, moral and physical. Playing upon the political superstition of the North, she has hindered its movements at every step by interposing the slavery question-know- Embroidery on silk or velvet. educated to yield everything-principle, interest, patriotism-rather than meddle with "Southern rights" of slavery.

What has been the fruit of this years We are not so near a settlement as we were at the beginning. The South, with all her losses, and under difficulties that would have appalled and disheartened any common people, is more united, has a larger army in the field-more comfortably provided for, and better managed-than she had a year ago.

The South is more formidable to-day than she was when she beleaguered Washington, held Tennessee, Missouri and half of Kentucky. She is united, while every day the leaven of old malignant political parties is working disaffection to the bottom in the North.

The South .has simplicity and unity of purpose. The North is uncertain which she wishes most-to subdue the rebellion, to leave slavery unharmed, or to have the right President at the next election!

The South adjourns every question and postpones every interest in favor of arms. The North is busy with conflicting schemes and interests, and is also mildly carrying on war

Does anybody doubt the result of such a course? It is so certain that it is not worth our while to waste anotherman or another dollar! Either the adhaging ration policy should instantly chapge or the war cease! It is not more vigor so much as different internal ideas. If the administration cannot be disenchanted of the traditional policy that has grown up during the heartless, timid, compromising era of the last half century, and adopt the simple and straight-forward policy that becomes a people striving for liberty and free institutions upon the American continent, then we are doomed! It is war that we are making-war first, war second, war wholtion making. It is not the decision of legal niceties. These are not the business of government as toward the South. It is war, absolute, terrible and immeasurable

The South has organized on the fact of slavery and fights on that issue, pure and simple. The North must organize on conflicts with her central idea. The North must do the same. The South is not ashamed of slavery. The North must be ashamed of liberty!

Under such circumstances, we hold 1. That it was unwisc to call for three hundred thousand volunteers. The day should have drafted half a million of mon for instant service, and half a million more as reserves. It will waste months of time and spand millions of money, and encourage growing discontent, and expend precious popular enthusiasm, and then be obliged to draft. It was not prudent. The people must consent to that or dismem-
