Western Carolinian:

Some blades will fight with blades of steel, and some with "leaden towels," Some nab your nob at fisty-cuffs,-some poke you through the bowels.

We learn from the New-York Enquir er that another affair of honor has been prevented the present week, by the timely interposition of third parties. On Wednesday, it is stated, two young sprigs of fashion quarrelled over their mint juleps about a certain passage in Shakspeare, the reading of which occasioned a warm dispute, which ended in blows, and a mutual agreement to fight. The barkeeper overheard their arrangement, which was to go over to Red Hoboken, and to cross at seven the of the young gentlemen. who managed to be near the ground before them, and to conceal themselves in an angle of an old building ;---and just as the lads had stripped off coat and vest, in order to accommodate cach other's bullet they sprang from their hiding places, each armed with a common cowskin, painted blue, and the doating fathers so belabored the hides of their dutiful sons, that their courage was cooled in a few minutes, and they started off towards the Wallabout at full speed, leaving Alexander the black in charge of pistols and toggery. On the whole, such seasonable interferences are productive of much solid benefit; they cool the blood, restore equanimity of temper, and probably prevent grief and funeral experces. The young gentle-men are, on the whole, satisfied with the result.

Lusus Naturae. - We have this morning examined a young terrapin, caught yesterday at Staten Island, by Louis Skorke, and by him presented to Mr. Peale for the Parthenon Museum, which is a very great curiosity. Its circumference is about the size of a dollar, and it has two distinct heads, and but four legs as usual. The heads and eyes are perfectly formed. But what appears more singular is the fact, that there is no concert of action between them. One head often pulls one way, & the other another ; and it is often a matter of some struggle in which direction the animal shall move. Sometimes one is the master, and sometimes the other; during, which times the progress is slow. Now and then, however, when they "put their heads together," and have apparently the same object in view. they walk off with the ordinary speed of common terrapins. It is really a curiosity which will afford much gratification to naturalists. N. Y. Com. Adv.

Bells.---We called yesterday at the store of Mr. Joseph F. White, No. 113 Water street, to look at one of Mr. William Hovt's patent Bells for churches and other public buildings. It is made of a bar of cast steel; shaped in the form of a triangle, and suspended by one of the angles in a wooden frame; the hammer or clapper being attached to the frame; and moved, so as to strike the triangle, by a wheel and rope in the us-ual mode of bell ringing. The value of the improvement consists in its economy. One of the common kind of bells costs at least seventy-five per cent. more than one of these, having a sound equal to it in every respect, whether as it regards its tone, its prolongation, or the extent of its The weight of the patent bell is almost one fifth less than that of the other: the expense of hanging it but a mere trifle; and the ringing occasions not the slightest shock nor injury to the steeple or building in which it is placed. It is believed that its advantages will be manifest to the trustees of churches, and other persons having occasion to procure bells, if they will take the trouble to give it an examination. N. Y. TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1826. The semi-annual Examination of the students in the Academy at this place, will commence on the 22d instant, and will probably continue two days. Parents and guardians, and all, indeed, who feel an interest in the success of this institution, will, it is hoped, attend and judge for themselves of its claims to their confidence and support.

The next session, we are requested to mention, will commence on Monday, the 2d day of January next.

The majority given in New-Jersey to the Administration Ticket, instead of being 2,000, is accertained to be nearly 5,000. This is a great change, in so short a time ; but it is not greater than may be anticipated in other states, on which the opposition calculated with as much confidence as they did on New-Jersey.

MR. WIRT'S EULOGY.

On Thursday, it being the day appoint-ed for the delivery of Mr. Wirr's Eulogy on the Ex-Presidents, the Capitol was crowded to an overflow by citizens and strangers, among whom were the Presi dent of the United States, who arrived from Baltimore about 11 o'clock, the Se cretaries of State, Treasury, War, and the Navy, the British, French, Swedish, Russian, Dutch, and Mexican Ministers, and their suites, as well as the lautes of such of them as are married, the Board of Military Officers, now sitting in this city, General Walter Smith, of Georgtown, and his suite, all the Heads of Departments, and the great number of strangers at present in this city. A considerable concourse of ladies honored the Capitol with their presence on this occasion. It was near 12 o'clock when the solemn dirge, accompanied by the slow and intermitted beat of the mulled drum, announced the approach of the procession, over which, in addition to the mili tary standards, floated a banner of white silk, edged with a deep border of black crape, in the centre of which the Stars of the Union were shrouded in dark clouds. About 10 minutes past 12, the large Hall of Representatives, being entirely filled, and the galleries occupied by the different military companies, Mr. Wirt com-menced the Eulogy, which occupied two hours and a balf in the delivery, and was listened to throughout with the most marked silence. The Eulogy of Mr. Wirt was delivered under numerous disadvantages. A deep feeling of interest, indeed, always was, and always must be Steam Boat at five o'clock this morning. felt by the Union, in the lives, characters, A very large concourse of respectable and talents of the great men to whom it and talents of the great men to whom it renown of our departed patriots; between | the triumphs of an Alexander, whose petty strides of conquest carried him over a section of the savage world; and a gigantic advance of the great subjects of his Eulogy, towards the moral and po litical emancipation of the whole world He admitted the extent of the assistance which their mighty efforts had received from the peculiar circumstances of the times; but contended that, to a certain extent, man being the creature of circum stances, Cromwell, had he been born in a Republic, instead of receiving the impulse which the circumstances of his age and country communicated to the powers of his mind, might have remained,

After dwelling with great pathos and eloquence on the peculiar description of virtue and talent which disinguished those mighty men who " gave impulse to the ocean of mind, and saw its waves reach the remotest shore; and then, hand in hand, left the world together, rejoicing in the success of their la-bors," and the difficult s which were surmounted by their genius and their perseverance, the Orator went on to give a condensed view of the prominent events in the life of each of the Ex-Presidents. It was a rapid, but an eloquent and accurate narrative, rendered piquant by the apposite reflections which a fine taste attered throughout the succession of instructive incidents. The peroration afforded a great scope for the poetical ancy of the Orator; he availed himself of it in a very felicitous and highly wrought description of the situation of Monticello, and a most imposing portrait of the phil osopher, in his retirement.

BALTIMORE MANUFACTURES.

We observe by the Report of the Board of Managers of the Franklin Institute of Pennsylvania, that at the recent exhibition the premium "to the maker of the best specimen of soft iron castings fit for small machinery, was awarded to Mr. Dean Walker, Savage Factory, near Baltimore, for a box of machine castings, which were, in the opinion of the judges, superior to any they had ever seen : it is en-tuled to the silver medal." Honorary mention (there being no premium for the article) was also awarded to Messrs. M'Kim, Sims & Co. of Baltimore, for a specimen of Prussian Blue, which was spoken of in terms of high commendation. and adjudged the best exhibited. Baltimore possesses greater facilities, in water power and sites for manufactories of all kinds, than any other city in the Union, and her skill and capital are en tering laregly into that branch of industry The approbation, therefore, of our pro-ductions by our sister cities and states, Balt. Patriot. is highly gratifying.
