We take the following from the Mariposa (Cal. ifornia) Chronicle. It may all be very true, but it sounds as if somebody was romancing:

We publish the annexed extract from a letter received a few days since, written by an old friend whose explorations in different parts of California have greatly assisted in developing her immense resources. Should this subterranean pass prove as practical for a railroad route as our correspondent anticipates, the whole subject will receive an impetus scarcely dreamed of by the most ardent imagination: * * * Having heard Major S. speak of a large and long cave that was somewhere near the head of Yo Semity Valley, and as the mammoth caves at Marble Springs formed in the immense marble ledge that traverses the gold region of California, are more or less connected by fissures, it occurred to me that there might be a subterranean pass through the Sierra. The hostility of the Indians prevented my acting upon the idea at the time, but it was not forgotten, and as soon as the beneficent influences of Lieut. B-'s administration of Indian affairs had extended to that region, stimulated by a desire to render my name as illustrious as some of our distinguished California travellers, and at the same time benefit my country, after amply providing for the undertaking, I commenced my exploration.

I had observed, while out against the Indians in 1851, that some Indians we were pursuing disappeared at or near a certain point at the head of the valley, and although we examined every rock and bush in the vicinity, we were unable to obtain that it became necessary for me to bathe. The failidea of taking a shower bath struck my fancy, and I at once repaired to the full, which exceeds in "cauldron;" but at this time there was a strong breeze blowing up the valley, sweeping aside the proach. I was about divesting myself of my garjoyful sight, the long sought cave. My ablutions were forgotten; I horried back to my party, and made known the wonderful and fortunate discovery. The rest of the day was devoted to the preparation of torches; and on the following morning, after a hasty breakfast, we commenced our

We had no difficulty in entering it, although we were thoroughly drenched by the sheet of water, back of which, protected by shelving rocks, was an open space leading to the cave. I have not Language to describe the feeling of awe with which I was struck upon entering the portals of this grand and glowing structure made by no mortal hands. All that I had read of in boyish remance, all that a vivid and erratic imagination had conceived of a subterranean world, was tame and commonplace compared with this sublimely stupendous work of nature. But to proceed: - With light d torches we cautionaly commenced our march, admiring the giant stalactities that reflected in magnificent rays the light from our torches. We had proceeded but a short distance when we observed what appeared to be a trail, worn in the rock. We at once decided to follow it. We had tollowed it but a short distance, when, passing through a bed of dust, we discovered Indian tracks, recently formed. We at first were startled at this discovery, but after a little reflection, we decided that in such a place tracks would remain apparently fresh for years: and then, after our tears had subsided, we were encouraged with the idea that the tracks would facilitate our exploration.

We were correct in our supposition, for had we not followed the trail made by the Indians, we would not have been left in more than Egyptian darkness. But I anticipate; accordingly we followed on, cheezed by the hope of soon emerging into the broad glare of day. Of one thing we were assured, namely, that there was an inlet as well as an outlet, for a strong current of air was meeting us, and our torches burned bright and rapidly-too rapidly, for our stock of fat pine was dominishing very fast. I thought of sending back for a fresh supply, when turning a sharp angle of the passage, we met face to face too tall and manly looking Indians. Language cannot express the astonishment and rage that was depicted on their countenances upon beholding us, and had it been in their power, we would have been doomed to inevitable destruction. But after a while I ascertained that one of them spoke a little Spanish, and with some difficulty I made them understand that we had been directed through the mysterious passage by the Great Spirit. They then told me in broken Spanish, that we were scarcely half way through the pass-that a little further on was an immense chasm, but that it was bridged by logs. which we found petrified, and that there were other passages that led into lakes and rivers, but without any known oul t. They said that this pass was only known to their tribe and ourselves; it had been mentioned to M jor S-, but had never been shown to him; that they were the great medicine men of their tribe, and were returning from a visit to the white tribe at the eastern end of the pass. They then gave us some of their torches, bid us good bye, and departed. We congratulated each other on our good fortune, and continued our march in high spirits. We found the chasm a yawning abyss, into which had been thrown many victims of savage crucky, for at the bottom, by the aid of a terch thrown down, we discovered the bones of many human frames .-We found nothing more to obstruct our passage except a few massive boulders, which we, however, passed, and on the morning of the fourth day, we entered the village of the white Indians.

Town Ordinances.

At a meeting of the Board of Commissioners for the Town of Charlotte, held this 12th day of August, 1854, the following Ordinances were unanimously passed,

Be it ordained by the Board of Commissioners for the Town of Charlotte, That the owners of lots in suid Town fronting on Trade and Tryon Streets be required to curb the side walks in front of their lots, with stone or hewn oak timber, and the space between the curb and the lot be raised with gravel or sand so as to make a convenient walkway; and any one owning lots in said town situated as a foresaid, failing to observe this ordinance within ten days from its publication, shall be liable to the penalty of Fifty Dollars, to be recovered before the Intendant of said Town, and shall also be liable for the cost of said improvement.

Whereas, the Central Rail Road Company have acted in very bad faith towards the citizens of Charlotte, in rendering impassable one of the principal streets of said Town by a deep cut, and then refusing or neglecting for the space of two years or more to make a bridge across said cut.

Be it therefore ordained by the Board of Commissioners for the Town of Charlotte, That the Intendant of the said Town forthwith cause to be, built a good and substantial bridge over the Central Rail Road at the deep cut crossing the Street leading by the Methodist Church, and known upon the plot of said Town as Seventh Street.
