

The Verb "To Do."

A brief conjugation of the verb "to do" can hardly ever be out of place. It is one of the most important items of practical life; and although we may have disregarded it, grammatically, since the time when we put off the discipline of the schools, and set our faces towards the world, the reality has pursued us with wonderful constancy into the great arena of active life, and exacted daily service at our hands. In short, all the enterprise, the genius, the skill, the fortune of the individual, the prosperity of cities, national renown—all there is of active, vigorous life—is comprehended in the verb "to do." Not to do is to be "done."

But how to do?—that's the question. Every body is doing, but who are doing well? As a general thing we may answer, those who do right—none who do wrong. Some of those who do right may be occasionally overtaken and prostrated by inevitable misfortune. While a few of those who do wrong, by like misfortune, seem to do well. From these exceptions to the general rule men have been induced very foolishly to say that "Fortune is blind." But we utterly reject the proverb. It originated in a narrow and partial view of human nature. Fortune is neither blind nor coy; but liberal and just, to those who "do" —right.

Yet how come short of ordinary success in business. Do they do wrong? Aye, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred. Our experience would enable us to cite innumerable instances in point. But our object is general, not personal. There are thousands of men totally unfit for the business in which they are engaged. There are other thousands to whom their business is unfit for them. There are multitudes who have no tact for business, and who flounder along through its perplexities for low years and finally disappear. There are others who have no knowledge of human nature, and are forever making serious impositions wherever they have a chance, until a bad reputation diffuses itself through the public mind to their ultimate ruin. Out of these and other infirmities, we see the few succeed and the many fail. It is the inability "to do."

Who has not seen a business opened in a given neighborhood, of some peculiar importance to domestic affairs for example? Housewives have looked to it as a welcome convenience. Every body in the vicinity was prepared to extend the hand of encouragement. Yet the first orders, the first purchases, the first articles made, have disappointed all expectations, and convinced one at once that a bugler, or at least an incompetent man had come in and taken the place that would have profitably occupied the active enterprise of another. He could not do what he proposed, and, as a consequence, every body who confided in him was done, until he was finally undone. There is not, perhaps, a single reader of The Sun, in any social position, who has not some experience of this sort.

The ability "to do" is not all; there must be the will with it. Every man in business must have the desire to please his customers. The editor of a paper, whatever independence he may profess, must be anxious to satisfy the public. It may seem an impossible task. Indeed, he of all men is most freely canvassed, and most unsparingly abused. Nevertheless, if he be a true man; if governed by sound principles, and can exercise his patience with faith, he can sustain cheerfully to eradic prejudice, assured that time will vindicate the truth. Who that can review the career of The Sun fails to call to mind several occasions in which it has labored in some public cause, adverse to a considerable amount of public opinion? But who is there can point to the result of such an issue, and say that in this thing The Sun was wrong? Is this vain boasting? Far from it. We were not alone in such opinions. Multitudes of our fellow citizens coincided with us, and the right succeeded at their hands. Our purpose was, simple, to do our duty, to do it well, and to "do it with a will," confident that in the end we should gratify as well as serve the public.

In every sphere of business life there must prevail a sincere desire to please those with whom business is transacted. If this is not a part of a man's character, he is unfit for business. Without it, he is a mere machine for purposes of traffic. What he does is mechanical, and his interest in the affair is confined to himself. Such a man may succeed, but he does not deserve success. The only sure and infallible rule of business life is to undertake what we can do—and to do what we undertake. To do it well and with a will.

ANECDOTE OF TOM CORWIN—Some years ago when Tom Corwin and Tom Ewing were on a political pilgrimage to the Northern part of the State, they were invited to carry over night with a distinguished local politician. The guests arrived rather late, and the lady of the mansion being absent, a niece undertook to preside on the occasion. She had never seen great men, and supposed they were elephants altogether, and all talked in great language. "Mr. Ewing, will you take condiments in your tea, sir," inquired the young lady, "Yes, Miss, if you please," replied the quondam S. B. Butler. Corwin's eye twinkled. Here was fun for him. Gratified with the apparent success of her first trial, at talking with big men, the young lady addressed Mr. Corwin in the same manner, "Will you take condiments in your tea, sir?" "Pepper and salt, but no mustard," was the prompt reply of the tactician Tom. Of course, nature must out, and Ewing and the entertainer roared in spite of themselves. Corwin essayed to amend the matter, and was voluble in compliment, anecdote and wit. But the wound was irremediable. The young lady, to this day, declares that Tom Corwin is coarse, vulgar, disagreeable man.

Speaking of the Know-Nothings, the Baltimore Argus says: "Dr. Orrick, who was some short time since a leading man in the movement, has formally withdrawn from the association; and with him a large number of others, who had been led by serious pretences of the conspirators into their secret machinations, have also resolved to quit."

HAVE YOU A DISEASED LIVER?—The question, though starting, is sufficiently suggestive, when the fact is taken into consideration that diseases of the Liver have become most alarmingly frequent in the United States. Indeed, there are few formidable to a deranged state of that important organ. Many of the complaints usually classed under the head of Consumption, have their origin in the Liver. "Any remedy that would insure regularity and healthful action in the Liver, would be a blessing to mankind!" That remedy has been the exclamation of thousands. That remedy has been found; it is safe and sure. When a fair trial has been afforded it, it has never been known to fail.

Reader, have you any disease of the Liver, or disease which you believe proceeds from hepatic derangement? Lose not a moment, but purchase a box of Dr. McLane's Pills, and they will restore you to health. It is the only remedy yet discovered, in which implicit confidence may be placed.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. McLane's Celebrated Liver Pills, and take none else. There are other Pills, purporting to be Liver Pills, now before the public. Dr. McLane's Liver Pills, also his celebrated Vermifuge, can now be had at all respectable Drug Stores in the United States and Canada.

WHAT DO THE PHYSICIANS SAY?—Listen to the testimony of an eminent physician in favor of McLane's Vermifuge, which is now universally acknowledged to be the best in use; even members of the medical faculty (who are so often opposed to the use of patent medicines) cannot withhold their approval of this invaluable remedy.

LIND, Stark Co. Ohio, Jan 8, 1849 I have used Dr. McLane's Worm Specific in my private practice, and am prepared to say that the unparalleled success with which I have prescribed its use, both for children and adults, induces me to say the most in its favor of any specific or patent medicine ever before brought to my notice. The mode of administration, the smallness of the dose, and the certainty of its efficacy effects, give it, in my opinion, a decided advantage over any other medicine of the kind before the public.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. McLane's Celebrated Vermifuge, and take none else. All other Vermifuges, in comparison, are worthless. Dr. McLane's genuine Vermifuge, also his Celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable Drug Stores in the United States and Canada.
