By J. R. NICHOLSON.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that his house, known as the "Railroad Hotel," opposite the Chester Depot, is still open for the reception of regular and transient boarders and the travelling public; and that he is making every exertion to deserve and secure a continuance of the kind and liberal patronage which has hitherto been extended to bi.n. He flatters himself that every needed arrangement has been made to promote the comfort of all who stop with him :- his rooms are airy and well-furnished, his servants are attentive and obedient, and his table constantly supplied with the best of the season, so that his 'riends will not want any attention necessary to make their sejourn pleasant and agreeable. His stables are furnished with good hostters and an abundance of provender, and he is prepared at a moment's notice to supply his customers with private conveyances of every sort, to any part of the surrounding country. He desires to return his acknowledgements to the public for past favors, and solicits for the future an equally liberal share of patronage.
