BY PERO. Come friends, draw nigh with tearful eyes, Sweet birdie see-its spirit flies, Though pained "as when a giant dies;" "Tis sweetly fled,

Its last sad requiem to the skies; Poor Willie's dead

When snows were falling thick and fast, A mournful dirge, he sang his last, And now is dead;

The merry fondling of the past, For Willie's dead !

Jumping from wire to wire so fleet, Its matin song the lark would greet, Far o'er the mead; The silvery chord of life, how sweet!

Its life it poured away in song, As sweet as zephyrs float along, Till Winter's poisonous breath ere long. Had sealed its rounded life of song ;

And Willie's dead It ne'er could draw the bitter tear,

A shroud and coffin too was made, Wherein its death-stiff bones were laid; Rests his cold head

Your comrade's dead !

HAVING ENEMIES. A man that has a soul worth a sixpence must expect to have enemies. It is utterly impossible for the best of men to please the whole world; and the sooner this is understood, and the position taken in view of the fact, the better. Even when pretended friends are fawning upon you, seeking to gain something through your influence or your means, it is well to understand whether they are not your worst enemies. There is such a small sprinkling of disinterested friendship in our present competitive state of society, that there is very little danger of mistaking a true friend when you really look sharp about you. Such an individual comes not with loud and blatant professions of good to you, nor with the mark of dissimulation upon his brow, but with a condid demeanor, plain dealing, and few or no professions. Unlike the "artful dodger," who is your seeming friend to accommodate his own selfish purposes, the honest man is chary of his compliments, and would "not flatter Neptune for his trident, nor Jove for his power to thunder." He is readier to bestow graciously his smiles. Men must expect enemies just in the proportion that they are thriving. "Enmity, hatred and malice, and all uncharitableness," are weeds of rank growth in the soil of the present times. There are enough of men's souls at every step taken in the path of life who would like to prevent your success; and they hate you as long as you prosper; if for no other reason, simply because they are not excelling you in your labor and your prosperity. It were of little use to heed them or their efforts; the sure and best way to triumph is to live down their petty slanders and calumnies. Such enemies are cowards, and they hate you because they fear you. The true motto for life is, to do right, and let the consequences take care of themselves. It is all sheer vanity to strive to accommodate yourself at every point to the whims and notions of some other persons, and try to square your ideas to please this or that sect or party. On the score of mere personal gain alone, you must inevitably be the loser; and once losing sight of your integrity and independence, you become the slave of petty tyrants, and make for yourself burdens heavy to be borne. Do right-though you have enemies. You cannot escape them by doing wrong. And it is little goin to barter away your honor and integrity, and divest yourself of moral courage, to gain what? Nothing. Better abide by the truth-frown down all opposition, and rejoice in the feeling which must inspire a free and independent man.

TO YOUNG MEN.

Some odd genius down east, gives the following elegant advice to young men who "depend on father" for their support, and take no interest whatever in business. but are regular drones in the hive, subsist-

ing on that which is earned by others. Come, off with your coat, clinch the saw, the plow handles, the axe, the pickaxe, the spade-anything that will enable you to stir your blood! Fly round and tear your jacket. rather than be the passive recipient of the old gentleman's bounty! Sooner than play the dandy at dad's expense, hire yourself out to some potato patch, let yourself to stop hog holes, or watch the bars, and when you think yourself entitled to a resting spell, do it on your own hook. Get up in the morning-turn round at least twice before breakfast-help the old gentleman-give hive him now and then a lift in business, learn how to take the lead, and not depend forever on being led-and you have no idea how the discipline will benefit you. Do this, and our word for it, you will seem to breathe a new atmosphere, possess a new grant you favors than to recieve them, and frame, tread a new earth, wake to a new destiny-and you may then begin to aspire to manhood. Take off, then, that ring from your lily finger, break your cane, shave your upper lip, wipe your chin, hold up your | Or make me feel one half so drear, head, and, by all means, never again eat
