MANURING .- I am of the opinion that strong stable manures are best put on broad cast, in sufficient quantities to enrich the land ; I have tried several modes of manuring in the hill, and drill-but find none of them to answer so well as putting it on broad cast.

I find upon experiment, that cotton seed sowed thick in the furrow, preferable to dropping them in a bunch around the corn. (I drill all my corn, especially in dry weather.) The corn is not so apt to fire as when the seed are thrown immediately around it. I experimented upon one acre of very poor pine land this year, (in corn.) I had a small handful of cotton seed sowed upon the corn after it was dropped, (I mean to the hill) and the corn covered with a board. 1 plowed it as usual. The second plowing through her tears. planting, by opening them in the centre with a large broad topped scooter, with a broad round point, have the corn dropped about 3 feet apart and covered with a board. In light sandy soils, I use nothing but a mole pointed sweep with the right wing turned up like a mould board, to throw the dirt to the corn. In giving it the plowings in this manner, I have a nice bed thrown from the Manufacturers. up to the corn. I find that deep plowing is injurious in light soils. The cause why deep plowing is so very injurious to crops of corn on light sandy lands, is, there is not unctious matter enough to make the soil stick to the young roots of the corn. Therefore the corn must make a stand for the want of nutriment from the earth until there comes rain to settle the dust to the roots. Any one can test this by pulling up a stalk of corn on light sandy land and one in close land.

Which has gained such a famous reputation I am very particular in selecting my seed corn. It is a law in philosophy, that like months. This Stove we warrant superior to produces like ; or, in other words, that like any Cooking Stove now in use. It is simple causes produces like effects-and if this be the case, how important is it that we should other Stove now in use. We will put one select good, sound, well matured ears of beside any other Stove of the same size in the corn for planting.

My mode of selecting my seed corn, is, the Stove, and quit selling and go our death when I am taking it up from the pile, I then have a chance to select ears of large size. and those that are heavy and well matured. And another thing essential is, to select those cars that have good hard cobs and large hearts. Corn that has large hearts comes up much stronger than corn that has small hearts. Also, I think large cobs preferable to small ones, when the grains are long.

PREPARING LAND FOR COTTON .-- On clay lands, I bed as is the custom of the country. On light soils, I turn two furrows together, leaving a hard space between them, then plant the seed in a small drill, covering them with a board. The cause of my leaving this ridge of hard earth in the centre of my cotton beds, is, that the cotton does not commence growing until the tap root gets to a hard surface. This I found out by pulling up cotton plants at various ages, when it first comes up until it begins to take the second row of leaves.

I roll my cotton seed in strong ashes :this makes them sow very even and thin, which is a great advantage in chopping out; the plants are much stronger, and being thin in the drill, it is not so subject to die; and another advantage from being thin, it does not require being chopped out so soon, and a hand can chop much more than if it was thick.

I raise a fine stock of cotton sent from Mississippi, (the Reynold's cotton.) It makes 34 pounds of ginned cotton to 100 in seed. I also plant old seed ; this gives me the full matured seed, the faulty drying up, which keeps my cotton from adulterating.

BEST OATS, is a large Northern Oat, that turns very yellow when ripe. The time to sow them is in October and Novembermake one third more than oats sowed in winter.

SWEET POTATOES .- I take my potatoes up in the spring, after the moon fulls in March, and put them out in beds, that they may sprout, so that by planting time, I can tell those that will not come up. I then (about the middle of April,) plant them, two small pieces in a hill. I usually plow my ground up two or three times, and when I want to plant my potatoes, I bed up my land like for cotton, some three feet apart, and check it off the same distance, to throw my potatoe land in hills. I then throw my potatoes on the middle of these beds, and rake up dirt enough on the potatoes to cover them. My mode of tending them, like most of my crop, is with the sweep, until the offices of Wm. Johnston, C. J. Fox, and the vines are too long for the sweep, and then frequently cut them off, finding it cheaper to cut off the vines, than to cultivate the potatoe with the vine. I hill them up about the last of July or first of August. leaving a flat hill, so that it may not be too high from the surface of the earth : when
