AABBBBBB II IR MARRAR

From the Soil of the South. COTTON AND CORN.

To ensure a good crop of cotfon, we must in the first place secure a sufficient numher of stalks upon the etre ; he other words, the stand must be good ; and in the next place, the stelks must have sufficient size. There are other conditions of course, which must be met to make a good cotten crop ; but these two may be considered prerequisites, and we mention them now, because they are essentially dependent upon the preparation of the soil before the crop is planted. In order to secure a good stand of cotton, it is necessary, in the first place, that the earth is which the seed are deposited should be thoroughly pulverized, that they may vertainly germinate, and after gerministion, that they may readily take woot and find support from the soil; and it is necessary, in the second place, that the young plants, when they come up, should be on a somewhat elevated ridge, otherwise they will be destroyed and the stand consequently injured, at the first working. To secure a good size to the stalk, it is necessary, in the first place, that the soil beneath the stalk should be well broken, that the tap root (which is the main feeder of the stalk) may easily penetrate the earth, and in the next place, a dry soil, or at least one drained of its excessive water, is an indispensable condition of fine growth in cotton. Now, the question is, how are these conditions to be met, in preparing the land ? If the soil intended for this crop is light, porous and dry, of coarse there will not be the same necessity for deep plowing and high beds, as if the land were flat and hard. In preparing such lands, therefore, the rows may be laid off with a small scooter, merely as a guide furrow, and on this the earth may be thrown from each side with a turn plow, giving the ridge simply elevation sufficient to faciliate the first working .-Where the land is hard, and inclined to hold water, the opening furrow should be as deep as possible, and it would be still improved by following in the same furrow with a coalter. We would also run the first furrow on each side of this, with a long scooter or coalter, and then finish out the

the corn at this stage of the crop, serves the purpose of causing the corn roots to strike deeper into the earth, where they are more favorably circumstanced for sustaining the corn in a drought, and are also better protected from the plow at subsequent workings. The subject of corn culture is an old one.

and a greal deal has been said and written in relation to it, but it is one of vast importance to the cotton pianter, and we shall never tire in its discussion. The last year has turned out a bountiful corn crop, and we fear that some, flattered by the universally large supply on hand, may be induced to dock this part of the crop, or be careless in its cultivation. This is bad policy .--Keep the corn orib well filled and you will have less money to pay out for bacon, your plow team will be kept in better order, and in consequence, your cotton fields will be better cultivated.

CALHOUN COTTON

MR. EDITOR: I have seen in the last number of your valuable paper, a communication from Capt. Byrd, of Greenwood, on the Calhoun Cotton. From a little experiment I made with that Cotton, I can endorse all Capt. Byrd says as to its productive qualities. I obtatned last spring, from Maj. James Cresswell, of Greenwood, a few bushels of the seed, and planted just as I did my other cotton, only a little later, from which cause I did not obtain a good stand; yet notwithstanding the imperfect stand, I gathered from a third to a fourth more per acre, than my Petit Gulph, planted in the same field, cultivated precisely alike. I planted a small lot, containing by measurement, seven-eighths of an acre, from which I gathered 1400 lbs. seed cotton, which is at the rate of 1600 lbs. per acre. This lot was not manured, nor any extra cultivation given it, though in that lot I had a good stand. From the fact that it matures some 10 or 12 days earlier than any other varieties I have tried, I think it is the cotton for our climate. I have been planting cotton in a small way in this District, for the last 18 years, and in that time have tried several kinds of cotton, but have never found any with which I am so well pleased.

In conclusion, I must say I have none of the seed for sale; any one, however, wishing to obtain them, can do so by sending their orders to Maj. Creswell or Capt. Byrd. at Greenwood, Abbeville District, South same stand. I shall remain in the Saloon, as heretofore, and will be happy to receive the calls Carolina.

Very respectfully, THOS. CUNNINGHAM. Anderson District, Jan. 8, 1856.

beds with a large winged turn plow. If the plow did not make a sufficient bed, or if the land had broken up into large clods, follow with the hoes, crushing the clods and raking up the beds.

We prefer that the beds for cotton should not be entirely thrown out at first plowing, leaving the two middle furrows to be plowed out just before the crop is planted. These furrows will nearly cover the beds with fresh earth, and when the cotton is planted, the furrow opened for the seed and the board used in covering, will scrape the top of the bed, so that the entire surface is fresh and clean.

The distance at which cotton rows should be laid off, depends entirely upon the quality of the soil ; if thin, just wide enough to admit the plow and horse between the rows; if rich, from four to five feet apart. We believe that the cotton field should be crowded to its utmost capacity, and we think the measure of its capacity is just that number of stalks which will completely cover every part of the surface of the earth with their branches, when the crop is matured. With ure of an introduction to him : this rule before him, the planter must graduate his rows by the size to which he waited on General J., and he and the Comthinks his cotton stalks will grow.

wish to purchase three or four hundred thousand bushels of good merchantable wheat, for which I will pay the highest cash price. Charlotte, from its facilities of transportation is one of the best inland marke's in the Southern States. I have erected large Merchant Mills contiguous to the Railroad, capable of grin ding three hundred barrels of flour per day,

So bring it along, if you want the highest figure for it. I am prepared to grind for toll. If you want flour whose brand will be sufficient to sell it in any market in the world, here is the place to and there to plead, answer, or demur to plain. tiff's petition; otherwise, the same will be heard ex parte as to them, and a decree made merican Independence.
